'GERMANS WANT PEACE,' SAYS HITLER AT DANZIG

A Ghastly Error

Russian Invasion of Poland Could Have Been Prevented If---

By J. C. OESTREICHER, International News Service Foreign Editor.

The German press, which speaks the mind of Adolf Hitler, laid stress today upon one factor of prime importance which has emerged from this most swiftly-moving of all European wars.

It is the claim, boast or asseveration that the influence of Great Britain in the affairs of eastern Europe has come to an end. No longer, say the Nazis, can London dictate what shall or shall not be done east of the Rhine.

At the writing, there is a good deal of truth in this particular German claim. For the Nazi and Red armies between them have surely eliminated British diplomacy from the Polish councils of state. And unless the Red-Brown military combine has overreached itself, the same sort of forceful eradication may soon be expected in Rumania and possibly even Turkey.

There may be little honor in a victory achieved by a 70-ton tank against an unarmed British diplomat in sponge bag trousers and morning coat. But in these days of harsh realities, one cannot help but wonder whether British diplomacy might not have been more successful in this long-brewing European mess if Britain's foreign envoys had at least been given bullet-proof vests..

Looking back upon the tangled course of events that ushered in this current war, it is impossible to ignore the conditions that Josef Stalin originally laid down for Soviet participation in the so-called "anti-aggression front" that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tried to build in revenge for Hitler's betrayal of Munich.

The Russians, it will be remembered, said that they could not possibly aid Britain and France to stem the conquests of any other power in Europe unless they were given blanket permission to cross Polish soil.

Their reasoning was entirely logical, but being Bolshevists and masters of duplicity, their intentions were immediately suspected. Anyone can see by looking at a map that Soviet Russia could not possibly fight Germany without trampling over Poland, Rumania or the Baltic states.

Now the thought of heavy Russian boots cutting furrows in their soil threw shivers of apprehension down the spines of every Pole, Rumanian, Estonian, Latvian, Lithuanian and Finn throughout the length and breadth of Europe. The Poles in particular, sitting in the cockpit and blissfully ignorant of the knowledge that in a few weeks they were to be wiped out, threw up their hands in dismay.

So the much-vaunted "anti-aggression front" collapsed. Without Russian assistance, it was hardly worth the paper it was written on.

To the British, long schooled in the finer arts of diplomacy, the result of Russian defection must have been obvious. Why then did the British not put a pistol to the head of Poland (which perhaps is framing it rather bluntly but none the less truthfully) and tell Warsaw that if the Russians were not accorded transit her fate as a vanquished nation was already written on the walls of time?

It may have been because Britain overrated Poland's ability to defend herself against Hitler's lightning stroke. It may have been that Britain never believed the Bolsheviks would sign up with the Nazis and carve up Poland between them.

But it is obvious there was a ghastly miscalculation somewhere. For the Russians have gone through Poland, not to help the allies and fight with them against the forces of aggression, but for self-aggrandizement that will now be hard to stop.

Russia's Plans In European War Still Remain Mystery

By JOE ALEX MORRIS, United Press Foreign News Editor.

Adolf Hitler came back to the historic city of Danzig today for the first time since the war and left behind him a record of triumph on the eastern front.

His armies were battering Polish defenders at Warsaw and outside of Lwow. His commanders greeted Soviet Russian troops as friends in eastern Poland and stood aside as the Red army fought its way into Vilna. His troops reported capture of another 60,000 Polish soldiers, whose government and commander-in-chief had fled into Rumania.

Hitler apparently had reached the point where—if all went well with the Soviets—he could turn from the eastern front to concentrate his full attention and strength in the west.

As Hitler entered Danzig amid the cheers of throngs and the ringing of church bells the Soviet's ultimate plans in eastern Europe remained a mystery. But it was considered significant that Moscow charged that the submarines of Poland "and other

ROOSEVELT TO GIVE PERSONAL EMBARGO PLEA

President to Address Joint Session of Congress When It Convenes Thursday.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The White House said today that President Roosevelt plans to appear before a joint session of the senate and house at 2 p. m. Thursday (EST) to deliver in person his request for revision of the neutrality law.

The White House, however, emphasized that the exact hour of the joint session still is subject to alteration, depending upon ability of congress to meet at noon and complete the routine of organization in time to receive Mr. Roosevelt's message at 2 p. m.

The message, precipitating what is expected to be a historic debate on measures to keep this country out of war, will be brief, White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said. Mr. Roosevelt, he said, will begin writing the message this afternoon, in advance of tomorrow's meeting with Alfred M. Landon, Col. Frank Knox, and Republican and Democratic leaders of both houses.

There was no indication of what specific form Mr. Roosevelt's requests would take but it is expected that he would ask congress for repeal of the mandatory embargo against shipments of arms and implements of war to the European belligerents.

WHERE IS THIS MAN GOEBBELS?

Travelers Say Hitler's Chief Denouncer of Bolshevism Is Actually Dead.

PARIS —(INS)— The fate of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, for many years Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's minister of propaganda and his chief spokesman, was the subject for keen speculation in Europe today.

Travelers arriving in Amsterdam from Germany said that some people in the reich believe that Goebbels, silent since the war began, is actually dead.

No measures have been taken by the German government, it was said, to stem the flood of rumors regarding what might have happened to him.

The German people in general, Amsterdam travelers said, are "astonished" over Goebbel's complete silence. His name has not appeared in official German statements for weeks.

Goebbels was Nazi Germany's leading denouncer of bolshevism. It was thought possible that he had been sacrificed when Hitler launched his rapprochement with Moscow that resulted in the Russo-German agreement.

Schwab, Stake Driver To Steel Titan, Dead

Founder of Bethlehem Company Once Got $1 a Day Pay.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Death at 77 has ended the fabulous career of Charles M. Schwab, the $1 a day stake driver who became one of America's steel titans.

The white-haired one-time "strong man of steel," first president of the million-dollar U. S. Steel corporation and founder of the Bethlehem Steel company died peacefully in his Park Avenue apartment last night of coronary thrombosis.

At his bedside were his brother Edward and the latter's wife.

"He just slipped away," said the brother.

Schwab, who returned from Europe Aug. 31, had been in poor health since the death last January of his wife, whose inspiration he often said brought him more happiness than his power or his millions.

Schwab's other survivors are two sisters, Mrs. David Barry and Sister Cecelia, a nun in the Carmelite monastery, Loretto, Pa., which Schwab built for the order.

The son of a wool factory mill hand, Schwab quit a $3 a week job as a grocery clerk to take a laborer's job driving stakes in a steel plant at Braddock, Pa., owned by Carnegie Brothers & Co.

In the evening, the 18-year-old boy studied the steel business and gave piano lessons to steelworkers' children at 50 cents an hour. In three years, he was manager of the plant at $250 a month. At 21, he married Emma Eurania Dinkey, daughter of the first steel works chemist in the United States.

Schwab soon became labor "troubleshooter" for Andrew Carnegie, the steelmaster, who liked the tall, husky young executive and boosted him rapidly. He was only 35 in 1897 when he became president of the Carnegie Steel company and in three years raised its profits from $7,000,000 to $40,000,000.

The late J. Pierpont Morgan made him president of the newly-formed U. S. Steel corporation in 1901, but two years later Schwab tore up a million-dollar-a-year contract because he said he was tired of having "too many bosses."

Sunk By U-Boat, 579 Missing

A toll of 579 dead or missing was seen today in the sinking by a German submarine of the British aircraft carrier, H. M. S. Courageous, shown above. Known survivors of the torpedoed $20,000,000 warship totaled 681. Officers and men aboard the ship at the time she was attacked totaled 1,260.

U. S. Will Soon Join In War--So Say The Japs

Nippon's Newspapers Predict America Will Enter Conflict If Tide Goes Against Britain; Blast At Fleet.

(By International News Service)

TOKYO—Assertions that the United States may soon join France and England in the European war were published by Japanese newspapers today.

Editorials warned the Japanese public against optimism regarding future Japanese-American relations. The newspaper Asahi claimed that the increase of the strength and personnel of the United States navy is directed against Nippon.

America, it added, is planning to pose as guardian of British and French interests in the Orient.

The newspaper Yomiuri predicted the United States would enter the war "as soon as the war situation takes a decided turn against the British and French."

Kokumin, a semi-military organ, said America might bring on the danger of hostilities with Japan, which is determined to realize its aims in Asia at any cost, despite allegations that the United States is exerting intensive pressure by retaining its large Pacific fleet and by dispatching an aircraft carrier to Manila.

"Why this seeming intervention?" Kokumin asked. "We ask America to confine her energies to her continental affairs."

A speech by an official Japanese foreign office spokesman at Osaka was regarded as the first indication that the Japanese government is preparing the public for a possible American economic embargo or is seeking to direct attention to American-Japanese relations.

The spokesman told a group of Osaka business men that the Japanese government is considering "suitable retaliation" against America's abrogation of the Japanese-United States commercial treaty of 1911.

It was believed possible that the present campaign with regard to America is the preliminary stage of a verbal and newspaper barrage that seems certain to bring about a more unfriendly atmosphere between the two countries.

Acts To Keep 'Pep Rallies' At School Because of Disturbance

Mansfield high school pupils may have to confine their future football "pep rallies" to the Senior high school building and grounds as the result of a disturbance in city streets, theaters and business establishments.

Supt. W. L. Miller of the city schools said today that he would recommend to the athletic board that "pep" meetings be limited to school property where supervision is possible.

The rally last Thursday night, sponsored by the Junior Association of Commerce, was held at the old Columbia Rubber company grounds at Bowman street and the B. and O. railroad. More than 200 pupils left the rally and paraded through the streets, damaging property and holding up traffic.

Denying that it is the school's duty to keep pupils orderly in the downtown section after school hours, Supt. Miller said much unfair criticism had been directed at the board of education and principals as the result of last Thursday's episode.

"It is up to the parents to see that their children behave after school hours and if they can't do it, then the police should step in and do their duty," Miller said.

He said school officials placed no blame for the vandalism on the Junior Association of Commerce which conducted the "pep" meeting last week.

WESTERN FRONT LINES TIGHTENED

France, Britain Get Set for Bolstered Nazi Army as Eastern Forces Shift.

(By Associated Press)

PARIS—(AP)—France and Britain strengthened their war line on the western front today in anticipation of a major battle as soon as German reinforcements are rushed back from Poland.

Entry of Red armies from Russia into war-battered Poland was viewed here as speeding the task of German divisions in the east and making more men and equipment available for defense of the west wall.

French reports said the nation's colonial troops were mobilized fully and ready to bolster her French army.

The number of colonial troops was described as considerably in excess of the total of effective fighting men called to the tricolor from the empire during the World war.

In the regular morning communique, the French general staff announced repulse of a localized German attack, launched during the night "in the region east of the Saar river."

Censorship Controls Flow of War News

(By Associated Press)

Censorship of news is effective in nearly all European countries. It is especially thorough in Great Britain, France and Germany.

So far the chief apparent hindrance imposed by censorship has been disruption of normal communications, but it is obvious that censors seek to prevent the sending of unfavorable news from their respective countries.

Some news dispatches are transmitted in ten or fifteen minutes; others are delayed for hours and some doubtless are suppressed by the censorship.

'No Intentions Against Britain, France,' He Says

But Fuehrer Warns Reich Will Never Surrender, Will Answer Each Bomb With 500; Declares Day Of Ultimatums Past.

(By United Press)

LANGE MARKET PLACE, DANZIG—Germany wants to create "a lasting peace" and has no war aims against either France or England, Adolf Hitler said today in a "peace speech" made only 15 miles away from where guns still were thundering.

Making the first public pronouncement since his proclamation sent Nazi troops surging in Poland on Sept. 1, the German chancellor said the reich and Russia will create a situation which will "relieve" tension in eastern Europe.

"I want to restore mutual confidence," Hitler said. "I have no war aims against either France or England."

But while it seemed to offer peace, Hitler's speech also carried the threat of a war of redoubled vigor and horror. He threatened, in effect, to loose the German air force against France and Great Britain and he complained of Polish atrocities.

"I have ordered the German air force to be humane," Hitler said. "If the democratic countries want it differently, they may have it. In this respect, too, my patience is not unlimited."

The German armed forces will retaliate hundreds of times over if bombs ever are dropped on cities in the reich, Hitler said. Those who "dreamed" they could crush Germany, he added, now know that for every bomb dropped on a German city 500 will be dropped in return.

Flags Fly, Guns Thunder.

Danzig was in carnival dress and flags were flying from hundreds of windows. Swastikas were everywhere. Fifteen miles away, while Hitler spoke, the guns roared as the remnant of the Polish army still fought the Germans.

The Polish army has been smashed, Hitler said, adding that 300,000 Poles had been taken prisoner.

"On one day 20,000 prisoners were taken," he said, "yesterday, 50,000."

He charged that thousands of Germans had been victims of Polish atrocities and that in some cases the eyes had been gouged out of noncombatants by Polish soldiers or civilians.

Germany, too, is ready to fight for three years, Hitler said, speaking scornful words about the decision of the British cabinet to plan for a war of three years duration.

"So there are people who now say: 'Let us make war for three years,' Hitler said. "Those who drive millions to death have no conscience. If this war should last three years, we will have something to say about that, too, and at the end of that time there will not come the word 'capitulation.' "

Blames Great Britain.

Hitler sought to place most of the blame for the war on Great Britain. He said that France had been ready for a peaceful settlement of the problems in eastern Europe, but that the British had "sent an ultimatum." He was referring to the British demand that he remove his troops from Poland or risk war.

"The English statement that they are waging a war only against my regime I personally

SURRENDER?: New Polish Government Formed, Report

(By Associated Press)

CERNAUTI, Rumania—Reports from across the Polish border today said a new pro-German, pro-Russian regime was about to be established in Poland, replacing the government of President Ignace Moscicki, Foreign Minister Jozef Beck, Marshal Edward Smiglyrydz and other Polish leaders who now are refugees in Rumania.

Informed persons forecast a new Polish government immediately would sign a peace pact with Germany and Soviet Russia and accept a redrawing of Poland's borders.

It was said the new state would be a "buffer" between the two great powers.

Maps mailed from Germany showing the expected partition and new spheres of influence were distributed here.

Polish resistance to Germany's overwhelming armed might was reported today to have dwindled to three widely-separated and virtually-surrounded armies.

Dispatches indicated the Poles still were holding out at Warsaw, along the San river west of Lwow and in the sector between Bialystok and Pinsk, but the plight of the defenders was said to be desperate.

(Lwow, capital of the Polish Ukraine, is approximately 210 miles southeast of Warsaw and about the same distance south of

LONDON: Britain Still Marks Time On Polish Invasion by Reds

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Informed observers said today that Great Britain and France, still firm in their pledges to Poland, would consult Polish leaders on the military situation created by the Soviet Russian invasion of Poland pending disclosure of its "full implication."

The British ministry of information, in a statement in which it was understood France would concur formally today, declared the Soviet action—avowedly to "protect" Ukranians and White Russians in Poland—"cannot, in view of His Majesty's government, be justified by the arguments put forward by the Soviet government."

There was, however, no intimation from any informed source that the ministry's communique could be interpreted as foreshadowing a declaration of war on Russia.

"The full implication of these events is not yet apparent," said the communique, "but His Majesty's government take the opportunity of stating that nothing that has occurred can make any difference to the determination of His Majesty's government, with the full support of the country, to fulfill their obligations to Poland,

—Advice—

Get New Grip On Self

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I seem powerless to handle my own sad problem, which has strained my mind to a degree that I feel mentally ill. I must confide in someone. You will, I'm sure, give me some sensible advice.

I've tried to reason with my husband, recalling our married happiness of twenty years. But this meets with only stubbornness and reticence, for the girl he sees daily is young and interesting. He provides comfortably for my children and myself, is home regularly, but displays little interest in anything at home.

We have a nice home. Children who are growing up need this background, but my mind seem to be failing, and I cannot summon sufficient effort for my daily task. How can I adapt my mental attitude to this situation? My husband does not yet seem inclined to break up our home Nevertheless, I feel I cannot stand the worry and strain much longer.

UNHAPPY WIFE.

Of course, you feel you must get away from a situation that has grown to be as intolerable as pressure on a bruise. But, would it be fair to your children to break up your home and leave them to their fate? For I need not stress the unhappiness and insecurity of children bereft of a home.

You tell me that your husband does not seem inclined to break up your home, and that he is there prettly regularly. What if this is just a dash of middle-aged vanity—and he sees this young woman because it preserves an illusion on his part? Don't talk about it to him. It's most unfortunate that you should have brought up the subject in the first place. Act as if the home-breaker doesn't exist. It's going to be terribly hard, but dry your tears and look cheerful. You will be doing this for your children's sake.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Father had barely finished his luncheon before Lillian's knock sounded on the door, and on my opening it she spoke with quick emphasis.

"Harry is on his way up. He sent a messenger ahead to say that he must speak with the Chief immediately."

Miss Whitlock had followed her in. She gave my father a careful scrutiny and put her hand for an instant upon his forehead and his pulse.

"You'll do," she said.

"I'm glad to hear you say that," he answered, "but I'd have to do, anyway."

"I know that," she said as she went out of the room again, almost colliding with Harry Underwood, who came swiftly through the door.

"Everything ready for you, Chief," he said. "The men are downstairs waiting for word from you. But I had to see you first."

I saw no signal pass from the big man to his wife, although his eyes met hers for an instant. But as if she had received a distinct command, she slid her hand under my elbow.

"It strikes me that you can do without the 'feminine touch' for a few minutes," she said. "Come on, Madge. We'll be out in the hall if you want us for anything."

"We'll hear all about it presently," she said. "But Harry tipped me off to get out now."

"As far as I could judge from his poker face," I said smiling, "your husband has found out something important while he has been gone."

"He didn't tell me anything," she said, with truth, I knew, "but I received the same impression."

"Then," I said with decision, "there is no possible use of my staying up here. You know as well as I do that as soon as Father has gone over the thing with Harry, he will have the men up and lay out their work for them. He probably doesn't want either of us to do any of the real trailing of Leslie, and he will have no time to see us or tell us anything until after all his plans are under way."

"Right you are," she returned, "so, what?"

"If you don't mind," I said hesitantly, "I'd like to go back to the nursery for a while. I have so few chances just now to see the children."

"Why should I mind?" she countered. "Indeed, I think it is a splendid idea. I'll stay up here and have a perfectly gorgeous time catching up on the latest magazines. It isn't often I have a chance to be downright bone lazy."

"You couldn't be if you tried," I said. Then I hesitated.

"Do you think it would be all right to take the boys outside for a romp?" I said.

"I don't see why not," she said promptly. "If Harry had learned anything which would be the basis for an objection to their going outside, you can wager he would have told me. You might ask the man in charge outside before you take them out, and I wish you would keep them within eye and ear shot of this window. Then I can signal you if your father should happen to want you, or if there should be a telephone massage for you. I don't need to warn you to bring them back in with you if you should be summoned back. Don't leave them out there alone."

"Not for a second," I returned fervently, and went down the stairs to the hall door without further delay.

When one guard had assured me that everything was safe, I dashed upstairs to the nursery, told the boys my plan and hurried them, ecstatic and jubilant, to the lawn outside.

We had a glorious romp, which I think I enjoyed even more than did the boys. But several minutes before the hour that I had allotted for the play was up, Lillian signaled me from the upper hall window.

"Philip Veritzen on the telephone," she said.

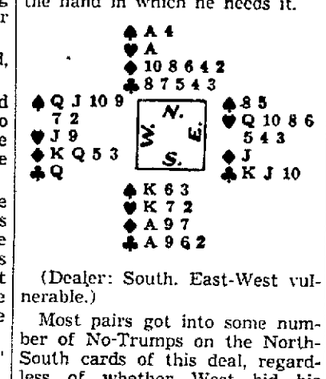
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TWO THINGS TO DO

BRINGING in a suit at No Trump play usually involves at least two important elements. First, the declarer must select the correct suit to tackle. Secondly, he must handle the situation regarding entries for the suit correctly. This sometimes includes his refusal to make a holdup play because it might result in the too early removal of an entry from the hand in which he needs it.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

Most pairs got into some number of No-Trumps on the North-South cards of this deal, regardless of whether West bid his spades or not. At one table it was South 1-Club, West 1-Spade, North 2-Diamonds, South 2-No Trumps and North 3-No Trumps. Most pairs stopped at 2-No Trumps, which got made at one table. Nobody made as many as three-odd, and some less than two-odd.

Everywhere the spade Q was led. One South took with the K, then tried to build diamonds with the A, then a little one to the 10, West holding up and winning the third diamond with the Q. A spade knocked out the A, then when the diamond K won, the spades were run. Declarer later lost to the club K, so took only six tricks.

The correct suit to try is clubs, because it contains one more card, not diamonds, because the 10 in it is higher than the club 9. But one declarer who tried it failed because he held up on the first spade, then saw his spade A knocked out of dummy.

The one successful declarer played correctly. He won the spade lead with his K, led the club A, club 9 to the J, captured the spade return with dummy's A, led to the club K, captured the heart return with the A, cashed two clubs, the diamond A and the heart K, giving up the last three tricks but making his 2-No Trumps.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Sept. 20.

THIS MAY be a day memorable for the removal of long-standing and tenacious obstacles, according to the lunar transits. This release from frustrating and static conditions may be due to the friendly intervention of an elderly person or an old institution as a reward for hard work, practical propositions and a show of determined resistance to difficult and constricting circumstances. The will to win will melt opposition of superiors or employers, but only through methods of candor and integrity—not by duplicity or trickiness.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which their stability and endurance of character will be tested. Industry, merit, steadfastness and determination should break down tenacious obstacles and deep resistance of superiors of those in power. Resolution, adherence to principle, integrity and the will to win against all obstacles will enlist the substantial support of an elderly person or a long-established institution.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, industrious, practical and constructive. It may have shrewd and quick intuitions, especially when hostility of superiors must be vanquished.

Vanity Spoils Job Chances

By MME QUI VIVE

It is taken for granted that a girl will be easy on the eye. Everything is in her favor. There are complexion tricks that help; the delicate powdering of the skin, the wild rose flush, lips tinted daintily. Good looks are so common that they're nothing to get steamed up about. So vanity hasn't any place in this delirious world, especially among women who are hustling to bring home the bacon.

The boss of the office likes to have his women employes neatly and smartly attired. Well set up, beautifully groomed. He does not approve of the girl who is beauty conscious, powders her nose while on the job, has a beauty kit in her desk drawer and likes to play with it. To be forever primping is the best possible way of making other people believe that you are not efficient, that your mind is not on your work.

That kind of a lass has an eye out for the boys. She's vain and she is flirtatious. She is a disturbance; and in course of time Mr. Biggie comes to the conclusion that he can get along without her. He expects his employes to have their noses to the grindstone, not be powdering them; their eyes on opportunities to serve the job, not darting come-hither glances at the male contingent.

Spiked heels are for dressup occasions; they were never intended for the girl who is carrying home a weekly pay check. Long, fluttering curly hair isn't businesslike. Picture hats are not for workers but for ladies of leisure who go to garden parties. Frocks should be smartly cut, of good material, but plain. The business world has no use for chiffons and ruffles. Nor is it particularly attracted by blazing red nail polish.

No career girl is going to get ahead who cannot efface her personality to a certain extent, nor can she progress if she has an eye peeled for romance. She is hired for the purpose of giving service to the firm; her friendships and flirtations should be elsewhere.

We must include among the foolish ones those who have a trail of telephone callers and who chatter about their personal affairs. The boss no likee that, no likee a-tall. It gives them a black mark. You can't mix work and play and expect salary raises.

Here's a new idea for dressing up pastry desserts made from fresh fruit or berries; reserve some of the most perfect fruit, chill it until serving time and then side dress the dessert. For instance, a few blueberries on top of a deep-dish blueberry pie or some red raspberries or blackberries right next a deep dish cobbler or berry pie.

CHAPTER VIII

Craig Madison was not a sycophant or one inclined to agree to his uncle's wishes unquestioningly because of benefits past, present or to come. He was honestly and deeply grateful for the kindness shown him by his uncle all his life, and though startled by this amazing situation, he did not for one instant hesitate as to his response.

And now, even while he realized how much more Harley Madison could offer, he had faint hope, which he tried to stifle, that perhaps wealth and importance might not mean everything to Yvette Verne.

Meanwhile another confab, of dire import and perhaps grave consequences was going on in the living-room.

Laura and George Lee and Anita and Gifford Hale had gone to play golf.

Craig and his uncle were in the study, and Ames busy in his office, so that Tom Sheldon was the only one at loose ends, and when he wandered into the room to seek company, he came upon a strange quartet.

Hetty and her husband Elkanah were opposite Yvette and Miss Cornelia, and the four faces showed signs of anger and bewilderment.

As Tom came in, he heard Hetty say:

"I'm plain-spoken. I am, but I'm nobody's fool. When I see a thing, I see it, and when I say I saw a thing, I did see it."

"Hetty's got mighty good eyesight," Elkanah observed, "and I defy anybody to say she ain't."

As Cornelia saw Tom she said: "Come in. Perhaps you can help us. Yvette, are you willing Tom should join our discussion?"

"Certainly," the girl said.

"Just this," Cornelia said. "Early this morning at three o'clock, Hetty says she saw Yvette out on the lawn and in the Ivy Arbor, accompanied by a strange man. Yvette says she did not leave her room all night, after she went up there from the supper party."

Sheldon looked at Mrs. Garson, who was tense with supressed anger.

"Hetty," he said gravely, "you saw a bear. Let's get this thing straight. Where were you Hetty, when you saw this scene?"

"A-lookin' out of my own window, and gazin' down at the lawn and across it to the Ivy Arbor."

"And you saw?"

"Miss Verne, as ever was! a-gallivantin' with a young man at three o'clock in the mornin'."

"And you deny that Hetty saw you out on the lawn, Miss Verne?"

"I surely do. I went to my rooms shortly after midnight, and I did not go out of them until about two hours ago."

"And that's what they call perjidy," Hetty declared: "my brother-in-law did it once, and they put him in jail for quite a spell."

"Keep quiet, Hetty," Cornelia said, "it's this way, Tom. I've talked to them a lot, and it comes down to the question of one's word or the other's. I cannot judge. I admire and respect Miss Verne, and I have no reason to doubt her word. I have known Hetty for many years, and I have never known her to tell a falsehood."

"That's what we call a deadlock, Aunt Cornelia. Miss Verne, would you be willing to swear that you did not leave your room during the night?"

"Mr. Sheldon, I swear I did not."

"Listen at her!" Hetty cried out; "the wickedness of her! But actresses, they don't care what they say, and they can make people believe their lies, because of their stage trainin' in make-believe!"

"Aunt Cornelia," Tom said, "without regard to the facts of the case, I think this conversation should not be allowed to continue. I think Hetty should be sent from the room, because she is in no state of mind to give true or even rational information about the matter."

"I agree with you, Tom," his aunt told him; "go away now, Hetty, and I will see you alone later. And don't prattle about this to the other servants, remember that. Elkanah, see to it, that she obeys me."

The Garsons went away, because it was their habit to obey orders, and not because they wanted to.

Yvette said to Cornelia:

"I don't know what to say to you, Miss Madison. I have no guilty feeling, for I repeat that I did not leave my room last night, but I deeply regret the unpleasantness my presence here has brought about, and I think it is only right to you all that I should go away. I do not want to think Hetty made up this story to annoy or to incriminate me, but I feel the woman has never liked me, though I have treated her tactfully."

"I say," Tom declared, suddenly, "I've just thought of something. You know, Yvette, you must know that your talent and fame rouse envy and jealousy in the hearts and minds of a certain type of people. Well, leaving Hetty aside for the moment, I can imagine a certain person dressing herself up to look like you, and with the assistance of a man carrying out that Ivy Arbor incident with the amiable intention of bringing criticism down on your fair head!"

Cornelia looked at him first blankly, and then with a dawning understanding.

"It might be, possibly it might be—" she said, thoughtfully.

"And we can all guess the clever little woman who put on the piece," Tom continued. "You and I, Aunt Corny, know that it was not Yvette that Hetty saw,—if she saw anybody—but it could have been—"

"Don't say it," Yvette begged. "I know whom you mean, but we mustn't accuse her, with positively no evidence."

"We won't accuse her," Tom agreed, "but I'll engage to find out who the man was, if, indeed, I don't know already. And if he has an alibi, then let's drop the subject."

"It's almost luncheon time," Yvette said. "I'm going out for a run in the sunshine, and I want to go alone. I'll be back soon."

As Yvette walked across the lawn and through the gardens, she pondered over the not very satisfactory situation in which she found herself. She knew, of course, who Tom had in mind,—it must be Anita—for no one could suspect demure little Laura Lee of anything in the nature of a practical joke.

She wished Hetty hadn't said that she saw her, for she didn't. At three o'clock that morning, she was in bed and asleep, and if anybody went into the Ivy Arbor at that time, it was not Yvette Verne.

She had never been in the Ivy Arbor at all. But she was going there now. She walked briskly toward it, and just as she entered, she turned her head to look, and she was almost sure she saw Hetty's skirt flutter round the corner of the house.

Nor was she mistaken. Hetty ran breathlessly to where Elkanah, her husband, was and cried out:

"She's gone there again, Elk! She's just gone into the Ivy Arbor! Chase right over there and see what she's doin'!"

"Lawks, Hetty, she can't be doin' no harm."

"Don't stop to heckle me, run, now."

So Elkahah shambled along, and when he reached the arbor there was no one there. He didn't care much, but he thought it was queer. Where had the girl gone? If she had been going into the arbor when Hetty saw her, she couldn't have popped out of sight entirely while he was crossing the lawn. For the arbor was in full view all the time he was approaching it. And there was but the one door.

He looked inside. It was round and plainly built; there were openings for windows, but no sashes or blinds. A seat went all round, and there was no other furniture. Miss Verne could have climbed out through a window, perhaps, but there would surely be broken ivy sprays to mark her exit, and why would she do such a thing anyhow?

With a horrible feeling of foreboding, Elkanah began to wonder if Hetty was getting a habit of "seeing things." Elkanah set himself to a diligent search for Miss Verne, in hopes of dispersing the trouble before it came.

He went round behind the arbor. There was a row of grand old oaks between him and the further spread lawn, but the lowest branches sprang from high up the trunks, and he had a clear view beneath them. If Yvette Verne had climbed out a back window and sped across the wide stretches of lawn, she could not get out of his sight during his trip from the house to the arbor.

And so, with a sinking heart, he decided that his wife's mind had failed in some way.

He dragged himself back to tell her his news, and found her entirely sane, and agog to hear about Miss Verne. And when he told her she had imagined seeing Miss Verne, her scolding was almost harder to bear than the thought of her insanity.

And then, in a doleful voice, Hetty began to sing:

"When the woes of life o'ertake me,
Friends desert and fools annoy—"

MANSION BUILT IN 1642 STILL SOUND BUILDING

Chippokes Plantation Home Convincing Tribute to Pine Construction.

For approximately three centuries the Chippokes Mansion has stood on the Chippokes plantation, a 1600-acre tract on the south side of the James river, a short distance from Jamestown and Williamsburg, Va. It is one of the oldest houses on the James river, and was built by Stephen Webb, in either 1642 or 1643.

This old home stands in excellent condition today, a convincing tribute to the durability of southern yellow pine and the sound methods of construction employed in its erection, for only minor repairs have been made to the home—excepting it was enlarged about 1700—and most of the original native yellow pine lumber with which it was built, still is sound and intact in the mansion.

Granted by Crown.

The Chippokes plantation was originally granted by the Crown of England to Captain William Powell, who came to Virginia with Gates in 1611. Powell was a member of the First House of Burgesses and captain of the guard at Jamestown. The plantation passed to his son, George Powell, who died without heirs, and then reverted to the Crown of England.

The Surry county records show that on Feb. 18, 1642, George Powell, of the Lower Chippokes, leased to Stephen Webb, 300 acres of the plantation, "the said Webb to build upon the said land a good and sufficient framed house, with two chimneys and glased windows, the house to be ground silled and underpinned with brick," and Webb was to "make an annual payment of one capon upon the feast day of St. Thomas, the Apostle."

In 1643 the plantation was granted by the Crown to Sir William Berkeley, governor of the colony. Through the marriage of his widow, Lady Berkeley, to Col. Philip Ludwell I, it came into ownership of the Ludwell family and was inherited in turn by Col. Philip Ludwell II, and Col. Philip Ludwell III, all members of the governor's council. By the will of Col. Philip Ludwell III, Chippokes was left to his daughter Lucy, who married John Paradise of London. Later the Paradise family returned to their Williamsburg home, the Ludwell-Paradise house, which was seized during the Revolutionary war by the state and all their Virginia property declared confiscated, as the Paradises were accused of being British subjects. Through the aid of influential friends the Paradise family some time later regained their property, but during this period they made their home in the Chippokes mansion.

The property was known from the beginning as Chippokes, being named for an Indian, Chief "Chippoke."

Monkshood, which starts growth very early in the spring; day lilies, Oriental poppies and eremurus are all herbaceous plants which should be moved now.

Stone House With Efficiently Used Space

There is an efficient use of space in this small home with its skillful planning reflected in the living room-dining room arrangement. The bathroom may be reached without passing through either of the two bedrooms while the kitchen has a rare and highly desirable feature in its bay window. This home was valued by the Federal Housing administration at $7,000 and was built in Ohio with the aid of a $6,200 mortgage insured by the FHA.

HERE ARE A FEW COLOR HINTS AND WHAT THEY DO TO HOMES

In Vienna and other towns in Austria, the tradition of employing murals for external house decoration is still carried on even after three centuries. Present day painters of this school of decoration execute their murals in an acceptable modern fashion without attempting pronounced realism. Many of them are developed in rich and vigorous colors laid on with broad, flat strokes over carefully completed drawings.

Charming Modern Apartment.

Simplicity and an arresting charm prevail in an apartment done in a modern manner with a lively color scheme. With a carpet of deep walnut color topped by a beige rug and walls painted light cream, the blond maple furniture and bookcases make a graceful harmony. A fresh light green is used for upholstery on the easy chairs and an occasional touch of tomato red strikes an exciting note from pillows, draperies and book bindings.

Victorian Sitting Room.

A sitting room with a Victorian flavor has been designed by an eminent decorating firm. Burgundy color paint is used for the walls. The curtains — matching the paint in tone—are held back by peonies fashioned from rose colored glass. The floor is covered with a flowered carpet patterned in shades of pink, fuchsia and magenta. Pink and burgundy paneling ornaments the doors and other woodwork. The chairs are covered with magenta, fuchsia and burgundy materials. Two of the stuffed chairs are tufted with pearl buttons. Fuchsia blossoms are painted on the pink china door knobs.

Modern Bedroom.

A bedroom with a very modern feeling has walls painted plain white, ceiling pale green and woodwork light gray. The floor is covered with a raspberry colored rug and the draperies are white, raspberry and gray. The furniture, painted black and gray, wears upholstery of gray and pale green combined in small strips; a plain gray textured material; and a raspberry fabric. The lamp bases are of raspberry colored glass with white and pale green shades. The dressing table mirror is of gray glass.

Increasing Business.

Two midwestern hotels have greatly increased the demand for their six hundred small and formerly unattractive rooms by placing great emphasis on attractive color schemes and supplanting the more ungainly furniture with small scale models. A combination of cream finished walls and draperies, pickled walnut furniture and brown upholstery meets popular favor. Because of the increased salability of these rooms since their modernization, it has not been necessary to boost their rates.

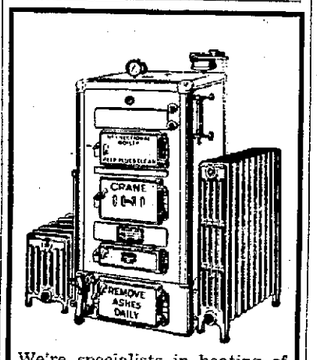
LONG LIFE FOR METAL ROOFS

Application of Good Paint Insures Years of Wear, Good Protection.

Tin roofs are one of the longest wearing types on the market and offer no fire hazard. Adequate care of a metal roof will prolong its life up to a half century or longer. And a large part of the care is the application of good quality paint at least every three years — oftener if the coating shows signs of peeling before that time.

Before painting, clean the roof of loose, scaling paint with a wire brush—or even steel wool or sandpaper. Then wipe over the surface with turpentine. There is no good reason why a tin roof must be painted red. It may be any other color—even white which reflects heat and would thus tend to make the interior of the house cooler.

Any type of exterior house paint or metal paint is satisfactory for coating roofs if applied over a priming coat of red lead, zinc chromate or zinc dust. At least three coats are recommended, applied in thin coats which dry for a full week before the next coat is applied. A new metal roof should be left to weather for two or three months before it is painted. This will allow the grease resulting from the tin plating process to be weathered away. Such weathering also serves to slightly etch the metal, enabling the paint to obtain better adhesion to the roof's surface.



We're specialists in heating of every type, and our many years of experience will help you solve, even the most puzzling heating problem, satisfactorily and economically, as well.

$45,000 Slashed From Schools' 1940 Budget Request

APPROPRIATION OF $559,292 SET FOR YEAR

Board Told Action of Budget Commission Won't Hurt Unless 3-Mill Levy Fails.

Mansfield schools will have to operate in 1940 on $45,000 less than the board of education requested for the year and $25,000 less than the schools had available this year, the county budget commission told the school board last night.

The commission returned the board's budget request with $45,000 slashed from the total figure, leaving $559,292 available for operating purposes next year. The board had requested $604,433. The 1939 appropriation was $574,303.

Dr. John H. Bristor, clerk of the board, said the cut probably would cause no financial stress unless the voters fail to renew the three-mill operating levy for schools at the November election.

If the present three-mill levy is not renewed, the schools will lose $170,000 from their operating fund for the year, probably causing them to close before the end of the term, board members said.

Sets Up $121,000 For Bonds.

The budget commission set up $121,206 for retirement of bonds and payment of interest charges in 1940. That figure represents an increase of about $30,000 over the $90,638 the schools received for debt purposes this year.

First payments on the board's $550,000 bonds for the million-dollar building program will require $26,000 more in 1940. Approximately $64,000 in old debts will be paid off this year.

The board last night authorized Bristor to request an advance settlement from the county against the last half real estate tax receipts.

The advance will be necessary, he said, to enable the board to meet teachers' salaries and maturing bonds. The general fund now shows a balance of less than $30,000 while the bond fund is overdrawn $17,315.

Hire Extra Teacher.

Miss Sarah E. Morrison of Uhrichsville was employed last night as an additional teacher in the Woodland school where the enrollment has shown an increase this year, Supt. W. L. Miller said. Miss Morrison is a graduate of Ohio State university.

Action was taken to ask the Mansfield Civil Service commission for the certification of the name of a third applicant for an assistant janitor's post in the school system. Clarence D. Fike and Ralph W. Hostettler had already been certified for the job. From the list of three the board will hire an assistant to replace Charles Wolfarth who will retire from active service.

The board authorized Mrs. Myrtle Houston, operator of the buses which transport pupils to Mansfield schools, to make an additional trip into the Roseland district north of the city at an additional cost of slightly more than $4 a day. Supt. Miller said the enrollment of pupils from that district had increased from about 50 last year to 80 this year.

Shows Movies Of Actual Fighting In European War

The first newsreel pictures of actual fighting in Poland and the bombing of cities from the air will be shown at the Madison theater tonight, Wednesday and Thursday, Manager Grattan Johnston announced today.

The Madison will be one of the first theaters in America to show the print which was brought to America by Atlantic clipper and which was brought to Mansfield this afternoon from the Cleveland offices of Warner Brothers.

Many of the "shots" were made from bombing planes, Warners said, showing Polish cities below and the exploding of bombs as they hit their targets. The advance into Poland of German forces shows tanks, mechanized forces and the bombardment of Danzig.

TRIAL IN RECESS

Fink Murder Case Jo be Resumed At Fremont Wednesday.

FREMONT—(AP)—The first degree murder trial of 22-year-old Velma Baker Fink was in recess today on orders of Judge A. V. Baumann, who commented that the strain of six days' in court appeared to be telling on the principals.

Judge Baumann, who granted the delay at the request of Defense Counsel Ben H. Dewey, said testimony would be resumed tomorrow. The defense is expected to conclude its case then.

Up and Down THE STREET

Sheriff E. P. Long has no complaint department at his office, but if he did it probably would be "stumped" by a protest he got the other day from a farmer on Cook road. The farmer's cow had a tummy ache which the farmer blamed on a neighbor who, he said, threw spoiled apples into the field where the animal could eat them. The sheriff wasn't able to do anything for the ailing cow, but he warned the neighbor to quit throwing apples—at least bad ones.

There is a possibility that every player on the Shelby high school football team will eventually be called "Wimpy" after the popular News-Journal comic strip character who helped make hamburgers famous. The reason: A Shelby restaurant offers a dozen hamburgers for every touchdown, the award going to the ball carrier. When expectant fathers wander through the corridors of Mansfield General hospital in the future they will have the comfort of a soft drink, cigarets and magazines. A new refreshment and newsstand has been set up in the lobby of the hospital, just inside the main entrance. It is one of 31 such stands—there's one at the county courthouse, too—all over the state which have been set up by the Ohio Commission for the Blind. It is being operated by Donald Moore, 90 South Main street, who is blind. The stand will be open every day from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Mabee and a Springfield man were tied for honors in a contest for $100 in cash in a gold-covered fish bowl. So the two divided the prize, Mabee getting most of his money in pennies, nickels and dimes.

TAKES TIME OUT IN SWAMP WAR

Department Gets More Slag to Pour Into Quagmire Near Loudonville.

The state highway department had taken time out today to gather re-enforcements in its battle against the swampland near Loudonville where attempts are being made to build a section of route 3 over the swamp.

Operations at the project were halted temporarily while the state seeks federal approval of an order for 2,000 tons more of slag and other materials to dump into the quagmire to form a roadbed.

Already tons of earth, stone and slag have been poured into the swamp, but it has swallowed them all, letting a roadbed made of logs sink into more than 15 feet of water.

The project, estimated to cost $86,000, is the only one of its kind on a state highway in Ohio. It is copied from methods used in building roads over southern swamps.

The experiment calls for construction of a short section of the highway on a timber mat which would "float" on the swamp.

Concrete will be used on the approaches to the swamp while the section over the swamp would be built of flexible bituminous materials.

GIVES SENATOR 'FAVORITE SON' ENDORSEMENT

Executive Committee Decides to Launch Campaign for Muny Offices Oct. 5.

The Richland county Republican executive committee last night endorsed Senator Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati as the "favorite son" candidate for the nomination for president in 1940.

The committee's endorsement is in line with action taken by nearly half of the G. O. P. committees in Ohio which have pledged themselves to back Senator Taft for the presidency as long as he appears to have the inside track for the nomination.

Ralph Hardy, county executive chairman, said the committee's endorsement of Taft as a "favorite son" leaves the county group free to switch its approval to another candidate if it becomes apparent Taft has no chance for the nomination.

Copies of the committee's resolution will be mailed to Taft and the state Republican headquarters in Columbus.

Gets Ready For Campaign.

Meeting in G. O. P. headquarters in the Warner building, the committee last night turned its attention to the coming municipal campaign which Hardy said will get under way about Oct. 5.

"The committee decided to shorten the campaign so as not to tire the voters with too much politics before election," he asserted.

He indicated the party would conduct a short and forceful campaign, presenting the platform and driving its points home in a few rallies at centralized points.

There will be no campaign manager selected, the county organization preferring to divide the task of conducting the drive between the executive and central committees as it did last year, Hardy said.

The party has selected no meeting place for the opening rally at which the G. O. P. municipal ticket, headed by William J. Locke, will open the month-long campaign for votes at the Nov. 7 election.

PAYS PENALTY

Trusty's Sentence Extended 6 Months for Escaping.

Harley Keller, 23, Ohio state reformatory trusty, one of the four who escaped from the institution last Tuesday, was paying the penalty today for his stolen freedom—six months of additional time.

Keller surrendered to the sheriff of Montgomery county Saturday after he fell off a freight car in Dayton and was returned to the reformatory by guards yesterday.

He escaped with three other inmates last Tuesday while engaged in repair work on the administration building outside the walls. The other three are still at large.

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke said that because Keller surrendered voluntarily only six months was added to his sentence instead of the usual two years.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Weiss Convicted But Not of the Alleged Fraud He Perpetrated on Louisiana

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—If my understanding of the charge against Seymour Weiss is correct, this prosecution was almost as great an indignity to the law and the prestige of government as the offense from which it arose.

Weiss was Huey Long's treasurer, who, once upon a time, in effect, threatened to slap the ears off an accredited representative of the United States Senate and made the senate curl up and quit.

He was Huey's manhood—an impudent, arrogant political racketeer who gave the Kingfish physical courage in moments of stress and in turn received from Huey the protection of a crooked political machine for operations the nature of which will be revealed in further trials in New Orleans.

It was not because the senate was afraid of Weiss that the membership of that august body suffered him to flout its authority and dignity personified by General Ansell during an investigation of the fraudulent election of a colleague from Louisiana.

The senators were afraid to tangle with Huey, whose machine had performed the election fraud, and Weiss realized that under Huey's protection he had nothing to fear from the senate.

Weiss has now been sentenced to 30 months in prison for using the mails to defraud—a federal charge—in connection with a larcenous transaction which has enriched the criminal patois with the picturesque term, "double-dip." He and other surviving Heits of the Long machine sold a hotel property, including furnishings, to the state of Louisiana for a certain price and then sold the same furnishings again to the state in a separate transaction.

The fraud itself was a state offense and no concern of the federal department of justice, and the use of the mails in its completion was incidental, inadvertent and unimportant. But once the thievery of the machine had been revealed by independent journalistic enterprise Frank Murphy intervened, or intruded, and discovered that in the course of banking routine certain documents in the double-dip had been sent by mail.

This gave him a technical charge against a group of rogue politicians who, until that time, had been on useful and congenial terms with the New Deal but who now, what with the disclosures in the press, were not merely useless but an embarrassment.

It is hard to believe that Mr. Murphy, though new to his job, was entirely surprised to learn that the Louisiana machine was crooked, for even if his knowledge of Democratic politics didn't include a smattering of Louisiana matter surely his F. B. I. and his nose knew.

Those who like to believe that Mr. Murphy intervened with his mail fraud charge for the impure political motive of matching or minimizing Tom Dewey's record in New York have a right to that belief.

It is one thing to punish a man for murder because he has incidentally killed another while engaged in a robbery, but to charge him with illegal parking because he left his car by a hydrant during the job and let it go at that is quite another. Having stuck Weiss for 30 months for violation of the postal laws, Murphy had made it almost impossible to get him in a state trial for the major offense of the fraud itself.

True, it might be impossible to get him for fraud in the state courts anyway, the state judiciary, prosecutors and jurymen being what they are, but that was none of Murphy's business unless it be held that Louisiana and any other state that he cared to name is incapable of minding its own affairs. This prosecution on the minor charge seriously jeopardizes the only charge that really mattered, it tends to degrade still further rather than to reform the state courts, and it gives encouragement to the belief of thieving politicians, such as Pendergast of Kansas City, that they can rob and debauch communities and persecute citizens for years and get off with a kick in the pants from a federal court when, by rights, they ought to hang.

If Weiss defrauded the state—and it follows that fraud was shown in proving him guilty of using the mails for that purpose—that was Louisiana's headache, and if Louisiana wants to quit being a state and become a ward of the federal government that should be done in the regular order of business, not by intrusion.

The Weiss prosecution smacks of trickery, and it may be observed that if a man were to escape, rather than incur, punishment for a serious crime on a technicality as cute and trifling as the one on which he was convicted the public would call his lawyer a shyster.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"How this business of acting has changed since the movies invaded the kennels!" observed Asta with a self-satisfied air. "For the better, of course. Need I add that?"

The celebrated star was taking a morning constitutional outside the sound stage where his supporting cast, including Myrna Loy and William Powell, was busy on some less important matters pertaining to filming of "Another Thin Man." He was accompanied by his companion and bodyguard, a human named Henry East. Of Mr. East the famous dog observed generously, "A right good fellow—without him I might be just another pup looking for a meal or a break. With him—well," and he cocked his ears back in a quizzical gesture that said everything.

"But back to this business of acting," he resumed at last. "There was a time in pictures, you know, when all we dogs were expected to do was jump fences, wake up the baby when the house was on fire, bate the villain where it would do the most good, and save Baby Peggy from the gangsters' guns. Of course we had a few odd chores like picking up time-bombs in our teeth and burying them in the river, or snatching the pay-puhs from the snarling old skinflint who was foreclosing on the old homestead—but those, too, were merely acts of physical prowess. Akin, I might comment, to that early period's glorification of the cowboy on horseback, and having no relation, obviously, to the real art of acting."

At this point Asta paused, looked reflectively at a prop lamp-post, muttered "Phoney!" and resumed his monologue

"Take me, now. With due modesty, and I am sure Mr. East will vouch for the truth of it, I can claim a repertory of 15 stunts, each of which is purely mental, totally unphysical. Incidentally, I find such real acting much more comfortable—I simply don't care for running. I always say it's the mind that counts, anyway. Well, could you imagine my friend Mr. Powell on horseback, chasing an Indian?

My repertory? Oh, I don't want to bore you, but if you insist—Well, I yawn beautifully, I look lonesome or happy, I register surprise, fear, anger, shame, delight—Oh, you've had enough? Well, it gives you an idea. Do you remember the first Thin Man movie, that scene in which I dive under the bed in panic when the gunman takes a shot at Mr. Powell, or Nick Charles as we call him in the picture?

"Well, that was acting pure and simple. I'm not really afraid of anything. Eh, East?"

"Right you are, Asta," Mr. East corroborated, and Asta registered what I think was surprise but may have been I-told-you-so?

"There was more to the scene, remember?" the star went on. "After the excitement, I poke my head out in shame, but then I see that my retreat hasn't been noticed, so I pop out and stalk around proudly as though I, single-pawed, had driven out the gangster. More acting—and, if I may say so, first-rate stuff."

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

ATTENTION, Dewey Stover! If your Braves had broken even in games decided by one run and extra-inning affairs, Mansfield would have finished only one game out of first place in the Ohio State league race this year.

Season figures show that the cellar Braves won only 11 out of 28 one-run decision games, and that they lacked the endurance of champions is shown in their record of overtime tilts. The tribe won only two out of 10 extra-inning games.

Tiffin and Fostoria were chiefly responsible for the Braves' poor records in these departments. The Mudhens won six one-run decisions from Mansfield, while Fostoria annexed five.

Fostoria's margin was even more decisive in overtime games. Of eight defeats sustained by the Braves in extra-inning games, the Red Birds administered five.

Mansfield's double-header record was virtually as poor. The Braves played 14 double-headers during the recent season, swept both games only three occasions and dropped both ends of the bills five times. They split with their opponents six times. The record in twin bills, shows 12 victories and 16 defeats.

SPLIT WITH BIRDS

ALTHOUGH beaten 10 times by Fostoria in games decided by only one run and extra-inning tilts, Mansfield compiled one of its best series records against the Red Birds. The Braves split even in their 26-game series with Fostoria and Fremont.

Mansfield was one game short of breaking even during the season's play with Findlay and Lima. The Braves' poorest record was made against Tiffin, which defeated Stover's men 15 times in 26 games. The Braves' record with each rival follows:

	Home W	L	Road W	L	Season W	L
Fostoria	8	5	5	8	13	13
Fremont	6	7	7	6	13	13
Findlay	6	7	6	7	12	14
Lima	7	6	5	8	12	14
Tiffin	8	5	3	10	11	15

Lloyd Joyce was the only Mansfield hurler to win at least one game from every team. The Hoosier, who broke even in 24 games, won four games from Findlay, three from Fremont, two each from Tiffin and Fostoria and one from Lima.

Lefty Mossor won from every team but Tiffin, while Leon Maloney was unable to defeat Findlay. Del Leslie found Lima his nemesis. The record of Mansfield slingers against the various foes follow:

	Tif. W-L	Fos. W-L	Fre. W-L	Fin. W-L	Lim. W-L
Joyce	2-1	2-3	3-3	4-0	1-5
Maloney	4-1	1-3	3-2	0-1	2-2
Mossor	0-4	3-3	1-2	2-2	5-1
Leslie	3-0	1-1	1-2	1-1	0-1
Laurila	0-0	0-1	1-1	1-2	1-1
Schremser	2-2	2-0	0-0	2-2	1-0
Patterson	0-0	1-0	0-0	1-1	0-0

Mansfield was involved in six shut-out games during the 130-game schedule. The Braves won four, Joyce fashioning two of the shut-outs and Mosser and Schremser the other two.

Rex Brown of Tiffin and Barney Fletcher of Findlay were the only pitchers to blank the Braves.

TOUGH TO BEAT

THE toughest pitchers for the Braves to defeat during the 1939 campaign were Fletcher and Lefty Prussing of Findlay, Lefty Biscan and Red Evans of Lima and Al Curry of Tiffin.

Fletcher faced the Braves seven times and registered six victories. He hung up two of the victories in a double-header. Curry and Prussing each won four out of five starts against Mansfield, while Biscan and Evans won three games apiece without a defeat. Records of Ohio State league hurlers against the Braves follow:

Evans, Lima	3	0
Biscan, Lima	3	0

Lynn Waldorf's Gridders Selected As Favorites In Big Ten Race Despite Schedule.

By WALTER L. JOHNS, Central Press Sports Editor.

IT'S ALL over but the shouting for the Northwestern Wildcats. The Big Ten title is assured, so is the national championship.

Whoa! Wait a minute! Let's reconsider this thing. Last year the University of Washington was picked to win the Pacific Coast conference championship hands down. It's a matter of record that the Huskies went through five games before they even came up with a victory. The Huskies finished fifth in the conference.

At the same time, the Rice Institute Owls became the popular choice of the national championship, the Rose Bowl and the choice All-American posts. Even a national magazine went so far as to add to the speed of the Rice bandwagon by a picture review. It's also a matter of record that Rice lost her first three games and finished the season in third place in the conference.

Now here we are in a new football season. And most of the midwestern observers see Northwestern as "the" team to beat in the Big Ten and also for the U. S. title. Where do they get this stuff? Well, let's look at the record, as Mr. Smith would say.

The Wildcats' setback by cap and gown was virtually nil. Only four regulars sang their swan song. The squad is a veteran one, with 22 lettermen ready to go. But most important of all is the rookie crop, as fine a bunch of possible stars ever enrolled for books and line bucks. One name stands out and has much to do with influencing the trend to the Wildcat wigwam.

That brings us to William De Correvont, 20 years old, pleasant, retiring, and a school of education pupil. Bill, by the way, is a sophomore football player.

You may have heard the name. It was spread up and down the land two years ago with as much gusto as was the name of Grange when the redhead was pedaling ice on the Illinois football field.

An all-around ace, his touchdown runs and passes and kicks as a Chicago high school player were fabulous. He drew 100,000 people into Soldier's Field to watch a charity high school game. He was sought by every school in the country.

What De Correvont will do for the Wildcats this year is difficult to diagnose.

Getting away from all this De Correvontitis, let's take a look at Coach Lynn Waldorf's fine squad, a team certain to be a Big Ten leader and possibly the flag choice.

Beginning at the ends we find a big loss in Cleo Dichl and Tom Eby, graduated. But the Wildcats really had four regular ends last year and Bob Daly and Ted Grefe, tall and husky lettermen returning, are capable wingmen. Jim Smith, lanky Negro, is a competitor. Leading soph is Bill Swigert, a six-foot five inch Evanston youth.

At tackle Bob Voights, one of the best in years, is gone, but returning are Nick Cutlich, 200-pounder, and Frank Young, a senior. Alf Bauman, a De Correvont teammate at Austin, hopes to make the grade. Two other lettermen are candidates for the tackle posts.

For those important guard posts Coach Waldorf has last year's regulars, Don Furitz and Hal Method. The soph contingent includes Merril Heagy of Aurora, Paul Kiefer of Hammond and Joe Cook of St. Louis.

The line will be built about John Haman, for two years an outstanding center in the loop. Haman comes from Naperville, Ill., and weighs 206 pounds.

Shifting to the backfield we find Jack Ryan, two-year letterman at quarter. The Milwaukee athlete, probably the most versatile on the squad, has played fullback and half and has done most of the team's passing. He will control the quarterback berth this year. Returning veterans are Nick Conteas and Dick Richards, good blockers who will alternate at the job.

At the halves Coach Waldorf has a jigsaw puzzle. He has so many backs he'll have to substitute every five minutes to give 'em all a chance. No less than 11 boys are ready to go. Headed by Hahnenstein, who averaged 6.2 yards per try last year.

Cincinnati Defies World Series Jinx, Opens Box Office

CINCINNATI — (AP) — The Cincinnati baseball club defied the World Series jinx today and opened a special office for the sale of tickets for the fall classic even though the Reds will face a tough battle for the pennant.

If Cincinnati captures the National league flag, the series will open Oct. 4 and 5 in the stadium of the New York Yankees and move to Cincinnati for games on Saturday, Oct. 7; Sunday, Oct. 8, and Monday, Oct. 9, if a fifth contest is needed.

General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Reds announced the following details for the handling of ticket orders: Ticket applications must be received before Sept. 28, addressed to World Series Department, Cincinnati Reds, P. O. Box 1078, Cincinnati, O.

Tickets will be sold in sets of three only for the games in Cincinnati with each purchaser limited to two sets. Only cashier checks, certified checks or bank drafts will be accepted. The price of reserved seats will be $16.95 a set for the three games and no game will be sold separately. Giles said there would be no box seats (price $20.40 for three games) available to the general public. Purchasers should not specify preferred seat locations, Giles added. The tickets will be mailed on or about Oct. 2.

BOWLING SCORES

Meder, Carr Set Individual Scoring Pace In Club League With 617, 610 Counts.

SCORING laurels in the Club handicap league were annexed by Sonny Meder of the Page Dairys and Wesley Carr of the Kiwanis club at the Meder alleys last night.

Adding scores of 201, 233 and 183 for 617, Meder led the Dairys to a pair of victories over the Optimists.

Carr started out with a poor 132, leaped to 256 and finished with 222 for 610. The Kiwanis took three games from the Liederkranz club, which led the team scoring with a 2665 total.

The defending champion Commercial Managers remained in first place by blanking the J. A. C. club.

Dintaman, East Side Club Lead Scoring.

BILL DINTAMAN produced a snappy 603 to establish the individual scoring pace in the opening matches of the Commercial C league at the Meder alleys last night.

Bowling with the New Method Laundry, Dintaman came through with games of 203, 171 and 229. Despite his fine bowling, the Laundrymen lost two games to the Jackson Potato Chips.

The East Side Night club annexed scoring laurels with 2408 sticks, which were good for a pair of wins over the Hecht and Casey Coals.

County Teams Prep For Second Contests

Madison Plays at New London Friday, While Shelby Invades Willard for Night Tilt.

THERE was no let-down in activity along the Richland county football fronts this week.

The Tygers of Mansfield high school are not the only gridders in the immediate vicinity working overtime on the practice fields in preparations for their second encounters.

Madison, defeated 25 to 13 by Wooster in their inaugural, play at New London Friday, and the Wildcats may offer the Rams a busy afternoon. The Rams defeated the Wildcats decisively last year, but New London prospects are said to be unusually bright this year.

Bellville was not scheduled this week, but it booked a last-minute game and will be in action at Granville Friday. The Blue Jays whipped Centerburg, 33 to 0, last week in their opener.

Centerburg will face another county foe this Friday afternoon when it invades Butler, trimmed 13 to 0 by LaRue.

Shelby, which comes through with a fine performance to outpoint Norwalk, 7 to 0, last week, goes to Willard Friday night to renew the brotherly rivalry between the Querys. Bill coaches Shelby, while his twin brother is head mentor at Willard.

* * *

One of the major games in this district Friday night will pit Crestline against Galion at Crestline. These two old rivals came through with triumphs last week.

Loudonville and Danville, former members of the defunct Mid-State league, clash Friday. This will be the Red Birds' first game.

M'Kechnie's Castoff Collection Aids Reds

Prize Exhibit at Cincinnati Is Buck Walters; DiMaggio Whiffs as Pinch Hitter.

By BILL BONI, Associated Press Sports Writer.

WHEN and if the Cincinnati Reds win the National league pennant, a large part of the credit must go to Manager Bill McKechnie's ability to find something useful in players who have been cast aside as useless by other teams.

Any way you look at it now, the race in the senior circuit has narrowed down to a contest between the Reds and time. The St. Louis Cardinals still are in there pitching—batting, too, for that matter—but every day the Reds hang onto their 3½ game lead makes the job that much tougher for the Cards.

And to help his club hang on, McKechnie has done some surprising things. His prize exhibit, of course, is Bucky Walters, the converted infielder who never really showed his pitching ability until this year. Then Bill picked up Al Simmons for the punch that might be left in his bat; he grabbed off Johnny Niggeling to strengthen his pitching staff for the final drive, and, in his latest move, called on the American association home run king, Vince DiMaggio, as soon as Kansas City was through the season.

Vince won't be eligible for the world series, but wise Will figures "he ought to do us some good" before the season ends. Vince played under McKechnie at Boston, but Casey Stengel sent him back to the minors because of his failure to hit.

* * *

DiMaggio broke in as a pinch hitter yesterday and struck out just the way he used to for the Bees. But in spite of that, the Reds moved a shade nearer the title. They split a doubleheader with Boston, and the Cards did likewise against the New York Giants. That left the standing looking like this:

	W	L	GB	GTP
Cincinnati	86	53	..	15
St. Louis	83	57	3½	*13

 One game with New York cancelled.

For a while yesterday, it appeared the Reds might jack up their margin. That was after they had beaten the Bees 4-1, behind Whitey Moore's six-hit flinging while the Cards were losing to the Giants, 6-2, on Cliff Melton's good pitching in the tight spots and a three-run homer by Tom Hafey.

But in the second sections of those twin bills Cincinnati fell afoul of some fine relief hurling by the Bees' George Barnicle, and lost 5-4, and the Cardinals let loose with their heaviest guns to bury the Giants.

The only other National league game saw the Pirates trim the Phillies, 7-4.

In the American league, the tail-end St. Louis Browns bowed to the champion New York Yankees, 6-2.

* * *

The Cleveland Indians dusted off the Athletics, 9-4, and thus drew up even with the idle Chicago White Sox in third place. In the other engagement, Washington's Dutch Leonard hung up No. 19 with a seven-hit, 4-2 trimming of the Detroit Tigers.

Joe's Sure He'll Stop Bob Early

Louis Holds Hatred for Pastor, Confident of Stopping Foe in Five Rounds.

DETROIT — (AP) — Joe Louis, ready to defend the world's heavyweight championship against Bob Pastor tomorrow night, has contempt and hatred in his heart for his challenger.

Personal feeling rarely has played any part in Louis' fights, but the titleholder has no liking for Pastor because of statements attributed to him and his manager, James J. Johnston, since Pastor surprisingly stayed the ten round limit with Joe in their battle in New York in January, 1937.

Louis is determined to prove that Pastor was extremely lucky to last the ten rounds. He is supremely confident of stopping Pastor within five rounds. The champion places this time limit on the duration of the bout even should Pastor attempt to run away from him.

The champion said: "I'm going to catch Pastor just as fast as I can. There ain't no use me foolin' around with him. The sooner I catch him the sooner my work will be finished."

Tomorrow night's battle, scheduled for 20 rounds, will be the first over the route in 25 years, since Jess Willard won the heavyweight crown from Jack Johnson in Havana in 1915. Supposedly, that distance favors Pastor who says Louis can easily be bewildered by feinting, causing him to miss his blows, blink his eyes and throw up his hands in an instinctive defensive gesture.

Reporting an advance sale of $300,000, Promoter Mike Jacobs expressed confidence the fight would attract a gate of at least $400,000.

The third man in the ring will be chosen from these three: Elmer (Slim) McClelland, Sam Hennessey and Clarence Rosen, all Detroiters.

* * *

Promoter Jacobs doesn't even want to discuss the possibility of a postponement because of rain but, if the weather forces one, the fight will be held on the first clear night following.

Pastor expects to scale 187 pounds and Louis about 201.

Indians Win 11 of Last 13 Starts.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Indians had a confident feeling about their third-place tie with Chicago today as they opened a three-game series with Washington, buried in sixth place. Buoying Redskins' spirit was the surprising victory drive that has brought 11 Indian triumphs in the last 13 starts. The latest decision in the string was over Philadelphia yesterday 9 to 4.

'QUITS' COUNCIL IN NAMING OF NEW FIREMAN

Rothlisberger Leaves Meeting After Confirmation of Harley Evans for Post.

SHELBY — Harley Evans was appointed junior fireman of the Shelby fire department by Mayor D. B. Young last night at the regular city council meeting. His appointment was confirmed on a 4 to 1 vote by the council.

In protesting the appointment, Councilman Kenneth Rothlisberger, the lone dissenter, told council that he "hoped" not to sit at any more meetings with the council if it confirmed the appointment. Rothlisberger left the meeting immediately after the confirmation of the appointment. Rothlisberger had favored the appointment of Kenneth Hageman, who was high in the recent civil service examination for the position. Evans was second.

Named To Boards.

The election of two council members to the firemen's and policemen's pension boards was held at the meeting. John Chew and Charles Swanger were chosen for the policemen's board, while Councilmen Kenneth Rothlisberger and Chester Bell were put on the firemen's board. Reorganization of both boards will take place today.

A petition was received and filed for the widening of Main street, Church street to Second street, from merchants and property owners in the downtown area. If approved under a WPA project as petitioned, the city, as sponsor, would pay for the material, while WPA would pay the labor costs. The city's share would be approximately $4,000, C. L. Beal, a director of the Shelby Better Business club, presented the petition.

Ordinances determining to proceed with the street improvement on Leichty avenue and with legislation for the $43,000 bond issue for the West Smiley avenue subway under the New York Central railroad which will be put on the November election ballot, were passed by council.

fy where the fighting took place, but it was believed to be in the shell-pounded region south of Saarbruecken, where French and German forces have fought numerous minor engagements.

British troops were said to have moved into position in the area of France's Maginot line through tunnels to the vast defense works.

Reinforcements, the French said, were moving up steadily from the rear through World war battle sites and the crumbling concrete works of Germany's old Hindenburg line.

Meanwhile, belief was expressed that Berlin would aim a diplomatic campaign at such neutral countries as Belgium, the Netherlands, Rumania, and the Balkan nations.

Officially, France apparently has decided to await the full significance of the Russian invasion of Poland before making any declaration.

NAZIS STRENGTHENED

BAZEL, Switzerland—(AP)—The morale of Germany's west wall defenders, as well as their actual fighting strength, was reported today to have been boosted by the arrival of captured Polish guns and other equipment and the allocation of several thousand warplanes no longer needed on the eastern front.

The German manpower already has been increased greatly by a shift of army divisions from the east.

Along the Rhine, Saar and Moselle river valleys the German watchword became:

"We have finished our part in the Polish campaign; now we will hold the Siegfried line against the French."

Fallen French Airmen Buried By Foes

A German guard of honor stands at the burial of two French war pilots who fell in action on the German side of the West Wall. The Berlin censor, passing on this picture, announced the aviators were downed "somewhere in Germany." They fell, it is believed, near Saarbruecken.

countries" were hiding in Baltic ports with the connivance of authorities in the Baltic states.

The Soviet charges mentioned Esthonia in particular. The territory now occupied by the states of Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania provided Czarist Russia with year-round ports on the Baltic before the World war.

On the western front, where British artillery had moved up to support the French, the Nazis made another counter-attack east of the Saar but were reported thrown back again by the French, who were seeking by methodical advances to gain control of both banks of the Saar river.

Nazis had strongly reinforced their Siegfried line forts and were believed to be using their big 16½ inch guns to shell the allied positions in German territory.

But the French, edging slowly forward, had infiltrated into the advance fortifications and it appeared that a major attack might not be long delayed.

On the sea, both British and French forces reported new successes in attacks on German submarines which yesterday struck the first blow at Britain's navy by sinking the big airplane carrier Courageous with a loss of more than 500 dead or missing. Royal airforce planes reported many attacks on German U-boats, some of which an official announcement said were successful.

Two more British trawlers were sunk by torpedoes, official sources in London believed, but the convoy and aerial counter-attack system was described as working satisfactorily.

In Poland the Germans and Russians were being forced to fight desperately at some points in their effort to close a great military trap around the scattered Polish armies.

Dispatches from Kovno, Lithuania, said there was fighting throughout the night before Soviet infantry, supported by tanks, entered the city of Vilna.

At Warsaw, the Polish defenders still held out against the Nazi attack that had cut them off from the rest of Poland, and west of Warsaw the German high command admitted that resistance continued.

Poles still held Lwow (Lemberg) toward which both Russians and Germans were pushing, but the Nazis were at the gates of the city and its fate appeared sealed.

THEATERS

THE FIRST "permanent" ocean has been built in Hollywood. It is Warner Brother's and has been constructed to last for a number of years. It cost $400,000 and represents the largest improvement project among the studios this year. It is covered with a roof to keep out the rain and has equipment with which a hurricane, tidal waves, typhoon, dense fogs and any kind of storms can be whipped up at a moment's notice. The "ocean" contains 1,000,000 gallons of water and is larger in area than a big football field. The first film to be made in it will be "The Sea Hawk" with Errol Flynn playing the role made screen famous by the late Milton Sills.

Leading Citizen Burns.

A strike in a small city, which is promoted and fostered by outside influences, is the theme around which the action of "Our Leading Citizen" revolves. Bob Burns has the title role, that of a lawyer-philosopher who represents the best citizens of the town. Susan Hayward and Joseph Allen, jr., provide romance while Charles Bickford provides fisticuff thrills. The picture opens at the Madison tomorrow, along with "Inside Information," with June Lang, Mary Carlisle and Dick Foran.

Wizard Continues.

"The Wizard of Oz" will run through Thursday at the Ohio where it has been a popular attraction. Although designed to appeal to both children and adults its greatest appeal is to the younger audiences. Music from the picture is now very popular on radio programs, especially "Over the Rainbow." The cast, assembled purely for entertainment purposes, is made up of Judy Garland, Bert Lahr, Frank Morgan, Jack Haley and Ray Bolger.

"Hotel Imperial."

A grand scale romance which moves amid the turmoil of a world at war brings the attractive newcomer, Isa Miranda, to the screen in "Hotel Imperial." She is seen as a continental beauty bent on wreaking revenge on a handsome Austrian cavalry officer, when they both meet at a hotel near the Russian-Austrian line. Ray Milland is seen as the officer. "East Side of Heaven" with Bing Crosby, Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer and baby Sandy, is the second film at the Ritz.

Two Leading Men.

Lew Ayers and James Stewart are leading men for Joan Crawford in "Ice Follies of 1939," in which the glamor star plays a famous ice skater. While the story has been lifted from the stage play "Excess Baggage," it has been brought up to date and a spectacular ice ballet added. One of the most interesting pictures of the year rounds out the Majestic bill. It is "Pygmalion" in which Lesile Howard has the support of a fascinating newcomer, Wendy Hiller.

Anything for a Thrill.

A dramatic air story and a romantic comedy are combined to make up the current Park bill. "The Lost Squadron," with Richard Dix. Joel McCrea and Mary Astor, deals with a dramatic phase of picture making—the ex-army pilots who daily risk their lives in faulty planes so that picture audiences may have a thrill. In "She Married a Cop" Jean Parker looks for a movie cartoon voice for Paddy the Pig and instead finds a cop with a tenor voice. Phil Regan is also in the picture.

JUDGE PUFFLE

By Gene Ahern

-LIKE ALL CHILDREN, PHYLLIS AND DUNCAN ARE VERY IMPRESSIONABLE!
-NOW, I WANT YOU TO KEEP YOUR HANDS ON THE STEERING-WHEEL OF YOUR IMAGINATION AND DON'T RUN WILD WITH THE STORIES YOU TELL THEM!
TUSH, M'DOVE!- I WILL ONLY IMPART TO THESE CRICKETS BITS OF PHILOSOPHY AND WISDOM ON THE CULTURAL SUBJECTS OF ART, MUSIC, SCIENCE AND HISTORY!
BUT, LOOK!- SHARKS HAVE BIG MOUTHS!- SO HOW COULD YOU SWIM AHEAD OF IT, WITHOUT IT BITING OFF YOUR LEGS?
HE SAID, PHYLLIS, HOW HE THREW A LUMP OF ALUM IN THE SHARK'S MOUTH, WHICH SHRUNK IT SMALL!
THE KIDS HAVE ALREADY GONE FOR THE JUDGE!

War correspondents seem unable to agree whether the present European conflict is an encore of the World war or whether the World war was just a rehearsal for this one.

British planes, we read, have dropped 6,000,000 leaflets on Germany, thereby achieving, if nothing else, the greatest circulation on earth.

• • •

One little chore the British and French forces need not bother about during the European war is the little game of trying to trap and capture the crown prince.

Germany faces no fuel shortage—headline. Naturally not, they can just burn all those British leaflets.

The feminine interest, according to Artist Clarence Gray, will soon turn from tan backs of life guards to the halfbacks and line guards.

Examine this table. It shows that $4.46 a month repays everything on a $100 loan in 30 months. The faster you pay, the less the total cost. These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2% monthly on balances up to $300 and 6% yearly on balances over $300 to $500. These rates are less than legal maximum, and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign—no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives.

MARKET RALLY LIFTS PRICES 1 TO 4 POINTS

Purchasing Demand Due to Belief Monday's Unloading Was Overdone.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market turned around today and, at the best, retrieved 1 to 4 points of Monday's set-back.

Purchasing demand at the start, brokers said, was due mainly to the belief of some that yesterday's unloading might have been overdone.

Stocks in front included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Western Union, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Westinghouse, Douglas Aircraft, General Electric and International Harvester.

Bonds moved up with stocks, but commodities were mixed. Sterling recovered briskly on treasury intimations something might be done to halt the wild gyrations of this currency in terms of the dollar.

Among items considered by market analysts were:

The Federal Reserve figures for the week ended Sept. 13, disclosed commercial, industrial and agricultural loans made their fourth consecutive broad advance, up $84,000,000 in 101 principal cities of the country.

With the latest sharp upturn in steel mill operations, forecasts were heard in this field that the production rate would touch the best level of 1939 in December at about 90 per cent of capacity.

GERMANY WANTS PEACE, HITLER TELLS DANZIG

But Warns That Day Is Past for Sending Ultimatums to Nazi Reich.

take as a compliment," he said. "I am proud to be the object of their attack."

"Russia remains what she is," Hitler said. "Germany remains what she is. Neither of us wants to sacrifice a single life for the interests of the western powers. We know well that we can best take care of our interests if the two greatest nations get together . . .all parts of the reich are now united."

He mentioned his three outstanding adversaries in Great Britan by name—Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty; Anthony Eden, dominions secretary; and Alfred Duff Cooper, former first lord of the admiralty.

"You remember my Saarbruecken speech wherein I referred to the danger of a system in which war mongers such as Churchill, Eden and Duff Cooper could come to power overnight," he said. "The things I warned against arrived."

Hitler spoke slowly and calmly at the start of his speech when he was reviewing the Versailles treaty an dthe events of the last six months.

Cheers of huge throngs along the roads welcomed the Nazi fuehrer from the moment he crossed the boundaries of Danzig. His declaration returning the former free state to the reich touched off the European war 19 days ago.

To Albert Forster, the Nazi leader of Danzig, the German fuehrer expressed his thanks in an emotional scene. He thanked Forster for his "fidelity, preparedness and heroic resistance" in behalf of Danzig.

Deeply moved, Hitler began his speech with an expression of thankfulness for his first visit to "this German soil."

He spoke from a platform erected in the Lane market place, in front of the ancient Danzig guild hall.

The fate of this city has been "the fate of Germany," the fuehrer said.

"The world war convinced all of us that it should never happen again," he added.

The Versailles treaty, Hitler continued, did not solve any problem but created innumerable new ones.

"It was only a question of when the German nation would seek a solution of its own," he said. "Eighty-two million people want to live and they will live."

"If others say that they have lost confidence in the assurance of German statesmen, then we have the right to say that we have none in their assurances," Hitler said in reply to Britain's charges that the world had lost faith in the fuehrer's word.

He said that "the stupidity of the so-called peace forced on the world" at Versailles caused doubt as to whether "the men who made that peace had their senses."

"All of those territories given to Poland were German," he said. "They owed their cultural importance to the German people alone. Nobody in those territories wished to become part of Poland."

He said that another 50 years might have thrown these territories "back to barbarism."

Hits Polish Culture.

"The lot of Germans in Poland was terrible," he said. "A nation of less cultural importance was given the right to govern a superior people."

Hitler said that the Poles took opportunity to vent their anger—"their inferiority complexes"—against "this superior German people."

"I tried, however, to find a solution," he said. "I tried to obtain definite frontier limitations. I worked for a peaceful agreement. I had an agreement with Pilsudski (the late Polish Marshal Joseph Pilsudski).

"But the German minorities were persecuted in barbaric ways."

This great power had to look on while its nationals were mistreated by an inferior nation," he said. "No other power would have tolerated such a state of affairs as long as Germany did. I wonder what England, France or even America would have done in a similar situation."

Hitler said that he considered his proposals for solution of the Polish problem as "overmodest."

"I wanted to spare the German people and also the Polish people," he said. "I wanted to spare them a solution by other than peaceful means."

He then repeated his demands on Poland, which the Polish government rejected. They called for return of Danzig to the reich, a corridor across the Polish Corridor for Germany and a plebiscite in the corridor areas to decide whether they would return to Germany.

"They rejected my proposals. I cannot understand why they did not accept. My request to the Polish foreign minister (Col. Josef Beck) to visit me in Berlin for a talk was rejected.

"Instead he went to London.

"We had to read in a Polish newspaper that Danzig was not the real problem but that East Prussia was the problem. Finally, it was said that the natural frontier of Poland was not the Oder but the Elbe river (deep in Germany)."

Hitler referred to British declarations in parliament that the war must be waged until "Hitlerism" is ended.

Hitler said that "war mongers are permitted to talk only in states without discipline."

The fuehrer pointed out that he believed a solution of the Polish problem could have been reached at the end of August.

"I waited and waited," he said. "Nothing happened except the mobilization in Poland.

"Patience should not have been confused with weakness."

Hitler said he had tried again and again" and "year after year" to reach a peaceful solution but that finally he was forced to warn "that there must be an end to this."

"Peace once again could have been saved at that time," he said. "France was ready to agree, but England instead declared an ultimatum."

"The Germany of today cannot be expected to accept any ultimatum. That day is past. I did not send any ultimatum to the Poles."

He said that "those who dreamed" they could crush the German army now know that for every bomb dropped on a German city five will be dropped in return.

Hitler announcing the capture of 300,000 Polish troops, charged that the "dirtiest acts" of the last decade had been committed in Poland and asserted to his audience that the Polish government has "admitted this" in their own radio broadcasts.

He referred to charges that "thousands of women and children have been slaughtered," telling his audience that bodies had been found with the eyes cut out.

The Polish broadcasts, he asserted, admitted that German parachutists had been murdered when they landed in Poland, presumably part of the army aerial forces that were dropped by parachute from planes.

"These atrocities are worse than in the last World war," he said. "I have ordered the German aircraft to be humane in this war.

"If the democratic countries want it differently, they may have it. In this respect, too, my patience is not unlimited."

Hitler said that, in connection with the Soviet advance into Poland, the English charged that Russia had betrayed Poland.

"The English ought to know about perfidy," he said. "I want to give an explanation.

"Russia remains what she is. Germany remains what she is. Neither of us want to sacrifice a single life for the interests of the western powers."

MARKS TIME ON RED INVASION

British to Confer With Poles on New Military Situation Before Making Decision.

and to prosecute the war with all energy until their objects have been achieved."

A full discussion of the situation resulting from the Russian sweep into Poland was expected in the house of commons tomorrow after another of Prime Minister Chamberlain's reports on the war with Germany.

Comparable to the shock caused by news of Russia's Sunday invasion was yesterday's official disclosure that the Courageous, the oldest but one of the largest of Britain's seven aircraft carriers, had been torpedoed and sunk.

The British admiralty today followed up a sparsely worded communique on the loss of the 23-year-old Courageous with a list of 438 survivors out of the ship's company of slightly more than 1,100 — but emphasized that the list was not complete.

About 400 of the survivors were landed in England by a rescuing destroyer last night and estimated about 800 were saved in all.

One of the rescued men said that within five minutes after the ship was attacked he "saw pieces of the submarine blown sky high by the destroyers."

"The first torpedo penetrated the Courageous on the port side through the stoker's deck and exploded violently," he declared. A second torpedo passed beneath us. The Couraegous sank in 35 minutes. Most of us either jumped into the sea from the decks, or slipped down the side of the heavily listing ship into the water.

"The destroyers raced around throwing lifeboats overboard. I was in the water over two hours."

The seamen who had to leap into the water sang, joked, and cheered as they swam about waiting to be picked up by destroyers, the survivors said.

(The American freighter Collingsworth from somewhere in the North Atlantic radioed the maritime commission in Washiington she had picked up 53 men and transferred them to other vessels).

The admiralty's communique did not give the position of the Courageous when she was sunk.

200 SENIOR HIGH GIRLS ENTERED IN TOURNAMENT

Intramural Soccer Event to Open Tomorrow, Continue for Six Weeks.

Six girls to act as team managers for the intramural soccer tournament which gets under way Wednesday afternoon at Senior high school were named today by Miss Margaret Clapsaddle, girls' physical education instructor.

Nearly 200 girls, representing every class at the school, have signed to take part in the tournament, the first to be held for girls this year. Opening Wednesday after school, games will be played Sept. 25, 26 and 27, and Oct. 2, 3 and 4. Games will be conducted in the gymnasium, on the athletic field and on the lawn north of the school building.

Girls entered in the tournament are to be divided into six teams. Managers of these teams will be Mary Maxwell, team 1; Sara Jane Deihl, team 2; Miriam Miller, team 3; Susie Spicer, team 4; Mary Alice Mead, team 5, and Jane Miller, team 6.

J. Merton Holcombe, director of band music in the public schools, today set out to find enough private cars to transport 100 members of the high school band and girls' bugle and drum corps to Massillon next Saturday for the Massillon-Mansfield football game.

It is the plan of the school to send three organizations to Massillon for the game if enough cars are available. If there isn't enough room for the 100 students, no effort will be made to take part of the groups, Holcombe said. If the three groups make the trip they will leave West Fourth and Bowman streets at 11:30 a. m.

Fans having room for one or more of the musicians are asked to call Holcombe at Senior high school or at his home.

Three new members elected to the Student Representative Council were announced today by Miss Kathleen Mendenhall, adviser. Two of the members are from the new 10-B class and the third is from the 10-A class and replaces a former member who moved from the city.

POLES NAMING NEW LEADERS?

Reports Indicate Formation of New Government, End of Fighting in Poland.

Pinsk. Bialystok is about 110 miles northeast of Warsaw.)

The entire Polish armies were said to be operating as individual units, without direction from the Polish general staff, which yesterday followed government leaders across the Rumanian border.

The desperately fighting Poles also were reported practically without aerial assistance. Most of the Polish air force already has been destroyed or interned in Rumania.

Polish government leaders who halted here in their flight before the advancing German forces were reported today on their way by separate routes to Bucharest, from where, it was said, they might go to Paris.

President Ignace Moscicki entrained last night for Craiova, near the Bulgarian frontier, where he was given permission to reside with Foreign Minister Josef Beck. Beck left here by motor and Marshal Edward Smigley-Rydz departed by way of Bikaz, in the Carpathian mountains.

A bitter argument between Beck and Smigly-Rydz on an undisclosed subject occurred at the Cernauti station as they bade farewell to Moscicki. The army leader, ignoring Beck's aides, stalked off to his automobile.

While the Germans were advancing from the west, the vast motorized Russian army was reported rolling through the Ukraine from the east.

The Soviet forces apparently planned to occupy the territory along the entire length of the Polish-Rumanian frontier.

Polish refugees streaming across the frontier offered an increasing problem to Rumanian authorities. The Cernauti chief of police estimated at least 100,000 already had crossed.

Polish staff officers and foreign military observers estimated Polish army losses during the 18 days of bitter fighting at 50,000 and 100,000 killed. The same sources estimated German losses at 35,000 to 50,000 killed.

Little was known here concerning fighting around Warsaw, where a radio broadcast last night was broken off suddenly during a talk by Col. Vaclav Lipinski.

Before the interruption, Lipinski said the city had been bombed and shelled throughout the day, but that the spirit of the populace was unbroken, and that it would resist "to the last man."

Meanwhile, Gen. Lev Prchala, commander of the Czech legion formed in Poland after Germany's absorption of Czecho-Slovakia, told the Associated Press 15,000 of his men had been captured by Russians.

MEETS TONIGHT ON BOND PLAN

Council Expected to Okay Issuance of $25,000 for Relief.

Meeting in special session tonight, city council is expected to approve legislation authorizing the issuance of $25,000 in delinquent tax bonds for financing the city's relief burden for the balance of the year.

Authorized by the state tax commission last week, approval of the bond issue would provide funds for matching state allocations under the new relief laws. The bonds would be issued in anticipation of the collection of delinquent taxes.

Council also will be asked to approve the transfer of $200 in sanitary sewer funds to pay for the services of James Collier, Elyria, as technical advisor at the sewage plant during the next four months.

COMPETE HERE IN SAFETY MEET

200 O. P. S. Employes From 9 Counties Take Part in Annual Contests.

More than 200 employes of the Ohio Public Service company from nine northern Ohio counties were in Mansfield today competing in the company's annual safety field meet.

The group representing safety teams from the district offices throughout northern Ohio met at G. B. U. park this morning to take part in artificial respiration tests.

This afternoon the teams, comprised of six men each, will compete for honors in first aid and safety after which a demonstration in combatting small electrical, gas and combustible fires with hand fire extinguishers will be shown.

A team from the Elyria office comprised of Clarence Gibbons, Paul Kress and Joseph Morgan will demonstrate "pole top" resuscitation, used for reviving linemen suffering from electrical shock while still on the pole.

Awards to meet winners will be presented by T. O. Kennedy of Cleveland, general manager of the Ohio Public Service company, at a dinner to be held at the park tonight. F. A. Chamberlin, Mansfield district manager, will be toastmaster.

The event is conducted annually under the supervision of C. S. Bowden, Alliance, general safety supervisor. The committee in charge of the arrangements included Harold Diehl, Mansfield; James Hayes, Alliance; Donald McGrady, Lorain, and Frank Ludwick, Cleveland.

Counties represented were Stark, Sandusky, Ottawa, Erie, Ashland, Cuyahoga, Lorain, Trumbull and Richland.

NEW CONQUEST?

British, French Hear Nazis Arm Belgium, Dutch Borders.

LONDON—(U.P.)—British and French circles today professed concern about reported German military activities near the frontiers of Belgium and The Netherlands, although there was no official basis for such reports.

Allied sources (also unofficial) said they had received reports that the AAchen (Aix La Chapelle) district, only a few miles from the Belgian frontier, was being evacuated by German civilians.

Aachen is a short distance from Eupen, which Germany surrendered to Belgium after the World war and is in a direct line with Liege, the route taken by Germany in the 1914 invasion of Belgium.

(In Paris, similar concern was expressed about the Aachen evacuation. French sources also reported that part of the German forces being recalled from Poland to the western front were concentrated "within striking distance" of the Belgian and Dutch frontiers.)

DESCRIBES EMPHASIS OF ROTARY CLUBS ON SERVICE TO YOUTH

Rotary clubs in the United States, and throughout the world, are to emphasize youth service as this year's special activity, according to Charles N. Sutton of Attica, governor of the 157th district of Rotary International, who made his official visit to the Mansfield Rotary club at today's luncheon meeting, held at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

In a talk devoted entirely to the principles and purposes of Rotary, Governor Sutton reviewed the history of this movement, since its organization by Paul P. Harris in Chicago in 1905, until it now extends into 80 countries, with 5,000 clubs and a total membership of 210,000.

Reference was also made to gradual development of the four objects of Rotary, based on ideals of service, into an organization that not only fits into community needs for encouraging acquaintanceship as a basis of worthy service but also gives opportunity to advance international understanding, good will and peace, through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the ideal of service, inspired by the motto, "He profits most who serves best."

Group singing was directed by LeMoine Derr, with piano accompaniment by Maurice Stretch. G. J. Kochenderfer, president of the club, presided as chairman of the meeting.

Harold W. Arlin, chairman of the club service committee, announced plans for a club assembly at the Hattery cabin this evening at 6:30, at which Governor Sutton will meet with officers, directors and committee chairmen to outline plans for the year's club activities.

BOARD ACTS TO BUILD GYM AT HEDGES SCHOOL

Hires Architect to Draw Up Plans; Estimates Cost at Less Than $10,000.

The Mansfield board of education took steps last night to provide an auditorium and gymnasium at Hedges school as soon as the junior high pupils there are transferred to the new Johnny Appleseed building.

The board employed Althouse and Jones, architects, to draw up plans and an estimate for the proposed gymnasium and auditorium which would be in the southwest wing of the old Hedges building, now occupied by classrooms. Cost of the project is expected to be under $10,000.

Under tentative plans, four classrooms, four cloakrooms and two hallways would be utilized for the auditorium. Removal of junior high pupils from Hedges to the new junior high building soon after Jan. 1 will leave ample space at the old Hedges building, Supt. W. L. Miller, said.

A member of the school board and Supt. Miller will meet Wednesday night with the Hedges P. T. A. to discuss plans for financing the project. It was said at last night's board meeting, however, that bonds probably will be issued within the 10-mill limitation and without a vote to finance the job. The project is not a part of the building program now under way.

Remodeling Completed.

The board last night approved the installation of an electric line at the Hedges school and a water line at the Bushnell building, virtually completing the remodeling of the eight older elementary buildings under the $1,000,000 building program.

With a few minor plumbing improvements at the Prospect, Newman, Carpenter and West Fifth buildings, which are expected to be finished this week, the remodeling project will be complete, Charles Conklin, architect, told the board.

Within a few days grading of the grounds surrounding the Johnny Appleseed building on avenue will be started so as to put them in condition for next spring. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy late in January.

The John Simpson junior high building, which is not so far along in construction, will not be ready until after the other building is complete, it was said.

GALION—Herbert Switzer was admitted to the Good Samaritan hospital Monday for treatment.

Vivian Amos of Grove avenue underwent a tonsil operation at the hospital Monday morning.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1939.

The most interesting puzzles lately are the war dispatches. You try to guess how much of 'em is true.

Those who can't think of anything for which to be thankful might at least give a thought to the Atlantic ocean.

There are indications that some folks are taking their religion out of cold storage for the duration of the war.

Task Made More Difficult

FURTHER complicated by entry of Russian troops into Poland from the east, with practical collapse of Polish resistance to Germany's assault from the west, the European situation has become even more confusing as congress prepares to meet Thursday to consider President Roosevelt's recommendations for revision of the Neutrality Act in a way that will permit sale of war munitions to belligerents on a "cash and carry" basis.

Whatever may develop as the Hitler strategy, in attempting to secure early peace after the conquest and occupation of Poland, now appears futile as Great Britain and France evidence determination to carry on the war to the point of exterminating Hitlerism from Germany, regardless of what, for the moment, appears to be the dismemberment of Poland and a German-Russo partitioning of that territory.

Developments of the past few days have tended to make the task of congress and the administration even more difficult in attempting to steer a neutral course and keep the United States out of the war

President Roosevelt's invitation to Alfred M. Landon and Frank Knox to join in a pre-congress discussion of neutrality problems is a heartening evidence of sincerity in the president's announced intention to avoid partisan differences in considering proposed changes in the Neutrality Act.

The controversy still rages as to whether the arms embargo should be lifted, or left as it is, with many contenders for each of these courses as most likely to keep us out of the war.

Debate, which may go through a number of days—possibly weeks—will likely divide into two main groups. It should be kept non-partisan, as nearly as possible, and at all times reflect an earnest desire to act in a way that will prevent foreign entanglements that might lead to participation in Europe's present imbroglio.

This is the time of year when baseball interest merges into football enthusiasm with scarcely a jar.

Needless Flag-Planting

AT THE CHARLESTON NAVY YARD, near Boston, preparations for Admiral Byrd's trip to the Antarctic continue undisturbed by war in Europe. He hopes the expedition will be under way by the middle of October.

This will be Byrd's third trip to the South Polar continent, but it differs from the first two in one important respect. It is sponsored by the United States government for the purpose of making official claim to territory there.

There was enough sentiment for such claims to win congressional support for the expedition, but many Americans remain unconvinced that it is wise to enter an international race to grab bits of that frozen land.

If it is going to be possible within the next few decades to take out and use profitably the natural resources of the Antarctic—and doubtless many people believe it is—it will be unfortunate to have it done to the exclusive advantage of a few nations.

Here is a chance for civilized governments to work out a co-operative and peaceful plan for sharing justly whatever wealth the Antarctic holds.

Hollywood prefers names in which there is an "r"—which possibly hooks up with the oyster superstition.

Disastrous 'Junk-Yard Derbies'

ANOTHER fatality, at Springfield, and injuries to two Mansfield residents, are the latest casualties attributable to the so-called "junk-yard derbies," which have been promoted in a number of Ohio cities this summer as Sunday afternoon "entertainment."

Scarcely a week has gone by for the past several months without report of either a fatality to a participant or injuries to spectators at such events.

Use of worn-out jaloppies for such races is supposed to provide amusement and thrills for onlookers, but the element of safety should not be overlooked in the matter of inspection of cars entered, and there should also be requirement for liability insurance sufficient to pay claims growing out of injuries or fatalities.

The Columbus Dispatch, commenting editorially on "junk-yard derbies" a few days ago, said: "If they are allowed to continue, the community may be appalled by a tragedy in which several lives, including those of poorly safeguarded spectators, may be lost."

There's a rumor that all automobiles are soon to be rear-drives—which is not to be confused with rear-seat drivers.

Many Seeking Knowledge

WITH the opening of public schools and colleges for a new term, there is revealed a great demand for education and training along many different lines.

In an Ohio college, which offers study opportunities not necessarily leading to an academic degree, courses are to be given in budgetary control and investment surveys, personnel management and labor problems. These subjects are presented in direct response to many requests from men and women who will do part-time study in addition to their regular jobs.

Night courses in gardening are popular in some public schools. These, too, are offered in answer to a large demand from men and women interested in improving their yards and getting the most satisfaction out of their gardening hobby.

Even more interesting is the experience of a college which yearly conducts an intensive, five-day course on "how-to-study." This year more than 1,000 persons thronged the college auditorium on the opening night of the course.

The war came on so abruptly that there was no chance to tie up radio reports with any particular brand of breakfast food.

Fear is expressed that any sudden industrial boom might result in millions of persons being plunged into employment.

Rand-McNally reports a shortage of pinheads—the sort used in marking maps to show locations of fighting.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt is losing no opportunity to play his side of the street. He is constantly telling the public about the reasons for repeal of the neutrality act.

It is a fair game. Opponents of repeal expect the debate on the issue to give them their chance to tell the public why this country should not revoke the embargo on shipment of arms to belligerents.

Scarcely a press conference passes these days but what the president plants some new kiss of death upon the neutrality act. The state department and the president openly oppose the measure, since they insist it gives an advantage to Germany by shutting off from England and France the source of airplanes, munitions and other war supplies which their control of the seas should entitle them to.

One observer commented that the act was equal to giving Germany an Atlantic fleet big enough to keep British and French merchantmen from reaching America for supplies. That comment did not come from the White House but it fairly summarizes the administration attitude toward the act.

* * *

'So-Called'

WHEN the current European war started, Mr. Roosevelt gave the neutrality act a rough boot in the breeches. His first proclamation of neutrality did not mention the law at all.

The president took pains to call that the "regular neutrality" proclamation. He wanted to demonstrate that the U. S. could have neutrality without the statute.

Then followed the proclamation under what Mr. Roosevelt described (with an open show of distaste) as the "so-called neutrality act." That is the one which, among other things, shut off arms shipment to warring nations.

Developments of the war helped also in his campaign. The "Athenia" was sunk, reviving horrid memories of "submarine atrocities" of the last war. And just to make certain that the White House had not missed the point, Steve Early, the president's secretary, reminded reporters that it should be noted that there was no question that the "Athenia" did not carry munitions.

Less direct, but even more forceful, was the president's explanation of the interpretation he had placed upon the Monroe doctrine with respect to Canada. A year ago in a speech at the dedication of a U. S.-Canadian bridge the president said that "the people of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other (than the British) empire."

* * *

'No Expansion'

A REPORTER asked him about the statement in the light of Canada's decision to declare herself at war with Germany.

The president insisted his statement had not meant an expansion of the meaning of the Monroe doctrine. At the time of its enunciation in 1823, he said, there was agreement that the doctrine meant not only that European countries would not be allowed further to extend their influence in this hemisphere, but also that possession of American territory should not be allowed to pass from one sovereignty to another.

At the time this last concerned only a few offshore islands and minor continental possessions of European powers. But its application now would apply to Canada.

It was a roundabout way of saying that the United States would not allow Germany to gain any foothold in the Americas, even if she should defeat England and claim her colonies in part settlement. With equal point it brightened up the administration argument that a neutrality act injuring England is not an especially good thing.

"Old Maids" Are People.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

WE GIRLS used to wonder about Miss Edna Smiley. Wonder what she'd done to deserve such an awful fate. Of course she was old. Terribly, terribly old. Almost thirty, maybe. And she lived alone, in the big square house on the corner. But even so, she didn't seem so Awful Different from our own Moms and Big Sisters. There were little curls around her face, soft, yellow curls. And a deep dimple in her right cheek, and she laughed a lot . . . a quick, bubbly, friendly laugh that made you laugh back.

Yet, in spite of all that, folks dropped their voices when they saw her coming. And acted—well, kinda sorry. As if she'd done Something Dreadful. Like old Happy Harry, who'd tried to burn down the town hall. Or the crazy woman, down by the tracks, who'd almost killed her own baby. Yet Miss Edna Smiley hadn't really done anything like that. She was just An Old Maid. But, of course, that was enough, back in 1889. That was just about the Worst Thing you could possibly be—then.

PERHAPS you're smiling . . . thinking what great changes have come in these last 50 years. Thirty years old—why, they call themselves "kids" at that age now. And yet—you'd be surprised how the old stigma still lingers in many a prejudiced mind . . . and many an aching heart. You realize that in a job like this, reading the heart-broken appeals for help in finding love, the bitter revolt against the sneers of the happily married.

The new picture coming out made me think of it . . . the poisonous cruelty of those old taboos. Yet we've come so far in other ways . . . why on earth should those old taboos persist? After all, what does a married woman have today that a spinster hasn't? Money. But a woman's economic need of man has long since vanished. Children? It's natural for any normal woman to want one of her own. Yet an adopted babe can nestle as closely in your heart as one you bear . . . I know, having had both. The darlings! And a woman's service to her harried, hungry world can be as sacred as the tug of a child at her breast. Perhaps even greater and more vital!

I'm thinking of a book that came to my desk today—that "Standard Biographical Dictionary of Notable Women"—just out. There are the brief, life histories of 6,214 American women in that book . . . women who have made good in fine and useful ways. There's a lot of femmes . . . and not one of them just a False Front. But here's something more surprising than mere numbers. OF THOSE 6,214 WOMEN, 3,668 —or 59 per cent—HAVE NEVER MARRIED.

F'rinstance there's Willa Cather, the writer, whose pure and noble English has enriched literature forever. Maude Adams, that fragile wisp of a woman whom many rate as the greatest actress our stage has ever seen. Anne Morgan . . . Edna Ferber . . . nothing stunted about their abundant lives. And, looking back, there were those others who, lacking mates or children, mothered all the world in their stead. Joan of Arc . . . Edith Cavell . . . Florence Nightingale . . . Jane Addams . . . young Saint Therese, "Little Flower of Jesus" . . . they shone and served without the aid of any man.

A cruel and silly thing—this emphasis on the marital state—this contempt, however subtly veiled, for those who do not achieve it. FOR SERVICE NEEDS NO WEDDING RING . . . LOVE REQUIRES NO LICENSE. A futile thing, too—this prejudice. For some of the sourest and most sterile souls I've ever met wore Mrs. before their names . . . and some of the most fruitful went to their graves unmissed. IT'S THE QUALITY OF THE HEART THAT COUNTS . . . NOT THE PREFACE BEFORE THE NAME.

War is nothing less than a temporary repeal of the principles of virtue. It is a system out of which almost all the virtues are excluded, and in which nearly all the vices are included.—Robert Hall.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — A number of heavyweight champions and challengers who fought frequently in America and who usually performed in the regulation purple or black fighting trunks have been hurried into a different type of uniform and are joining their regiments in Europe.

Poor old Primo Carnero is in Sequals, Italy, running a restaurant, but his knapsack is packed, and his big No. 16 boots are shined, ready to march if Il Duce tells him to. Max Schmeling is somewhere in Germany, in the army. He always said he would never accept an "office" job, but would march in the line. Paulino, the Durable Basque, is chief of police in Valencia, Spain, and Tommy Farr, who could win fights in London, but not in New York, is backing Chamberlain to the limit.

Gustav Kilian and Hans Vopel, the best bicycle riders New York has seen in years, have returned to Germany and rejoined their regiments. They were so good over here that the team had to be broken up. No one could beat them.

P.S. When last heard from, Joe Louis was in Detroit, eating fried chicken.

AN UPTOWN bride, purchasing the week's groceries, selected a ten pound bag of sugar to be taken to her car. . . . "But you can only have five pounds, Miss—the order just came through."

Hurrying home, and frightened by stories of rising food prices due to the war, she quickly spread the word and everybody in the neighborhood began hurrying down to the grocery to lay in supplies. Everybody got himself five pounds of sugar, but no more.

After awhile the store became so crowded that the manager and his staff began asking questions. "Well," said one customer, "before the war sends sugar out of reach, we're trying to get all we can."

That made the manager laugh, because the "5-lb. limit" was his own order. He was having a sale on sugar and wanted all of his customers to have a share of it. His sale price on the five pounds was three cents cheaper than the average quotation.

TOMMY DORSAY and Guy Lombardo are great spaghetti lovers, and whenever their orchestras are in the same vicinity they meet once a week and indulge in an old fashioned Italian dinner. They've been doing this for years.

Three alumni of a kind are Kay Kyser, Hal Kemp and Jan Garber. All are products of the University of North Carolina.

People who know Gary Cooper say he is a changed man once you get him at a table and the conversation begins to flow. Ordinarily he is gruff and looks half scared to death—not actually, but ill at ease around strangers and fighting against the impulse to turn and walk away. After he "warms up," they say he is a plenty good egg.

Daily Bible Thought

TODAY IN HISTORY

James A. Garfield, 20th president of the United States, died at Elberon, N. J., on Sept. 19, 1881.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It is not being advertised as yet, but the state department will vigorously protest the sinking of the British steamship Athenia with 1,347 passengers and crew aboard.

Behind the scenes, Mr. Hull and his aides regard the Athenia sinking as a far worse breach of international law than the sinking of the Lusitania.

The Athenia protest, however, has been delayed solely because the Nazis disclaimed responsibility. In contrast, the Imperial German government of 1914-18 never disclaimed responsibility for submarine sinkings except in one minor case.

Although the state department has no great regard for the veracity of the Nazi government, Hull's legal experts are examining carefully the affidavits of the Athenia survivors. So far these indicate clearly that the ship was torpedoed by a submarine. However, to make absolutely sure the examination is continuing.

There are four reasons why the state department regards the Athenia sinking as worse than the Lusitania's:

1. The Athenia carried no contraband, while the Lusitania did.

2. The Athenia was departing from Europe largely with Americans trying to escape the war zone. There was no possible chance that she could be engaged in war activity.

3. The Lusitania was warned in advance by newspaper notices that she would be torpedoed. The Athenia got no notice even from the submarine.

4. Germany had agreed in an official treaty with Britain only four years ago to restrict submarine warfare. This was deliberately violated by sinking the Athenia.

All of these points will be incorporated in a vigorous protest note to Germany.

Old Age Pensions.

PERIODS when national attention is focused upon war abroad always offer the best opportunity for scandal at home. So it might be well to keep an eye on the New Deal agency which hits the pocketbook of more than half the nation's population—the society security board.

Near scandal in that organization just unearthed by Paul McNutt, new boss of the federal security administration, is that between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 old age cards in the SSB's files are not properly identified. In other words, when it comes time to pay old age benefits next January, many people who have paid in their taxes may get no pensions.

This not only has the makings of a national furore, but focuses attention upon an extraordinary situation inside the security board.

Ever since McNutt's appointment as administrator of social security, public health, the bureau of education, the CCC and NYA, which make up the new federal security agency, the statuesque ex-governor of Indiana has been the center of behind-the-scenes friction.

The social security executives regarded him as a political interloper and resented his appointment. To them the dynamic McNutt, ambitious to make a record as an outstanding executive, loomed as a large pain in the neck. Now he is more than that; he is a menace.

For in addition to discovery of favoritism and incompetence, he has unearthed the "John Doe" cards referred to above.

Reason For John Does.

M'NUTT has made an investigation of these cards and found that the inability to identify them completely is due in large part to the "decentralization" of old-age records undertaken by the board some time ago.

Originally the social security board set up a centralized filing system modeled after that of the veterans bureau and organized by Henry P. Seidemann, Brookings Institution accounting expert, assisted by a staff of experts.

But early in 1937, without a word to Seidemann, who had been promoted to director of the old-age benefits bureau, SSB Chairman Altmeyer ordered him to decentralize his 40,000,000 old-age pension records by duplicating them twelve times and distributing them to each of the twelve regional offices.

This astounding order was too much for Seidemann. He quit and with him exited most of his experts. The decentralization plan never went through, however, for the White House got wind of it and ordered Altmeyer to drop it. He did, but only partially.

The records were retained under one roof, but Altmeyer went ahead with the scheme to decentralize them in twelve regional files. The result was chaos. Although three shifts of clerks worked 24 hours daily for months, the posting of accounts fell one year behind.

Finally, in July, 1938, the analysis division of the SSB submitted a report inferentially condemning the regional system and urging a return to Seidemann's original plan. A month later, this recommendation was followed, and the experiment, which had cost the taxpayers several millions and almost hopelessly messed up millions of records, was abandoned.

Favoritism.

ONE of the master minds credited with responsibility for this experiment was John J. Corson, 34-year-old native of Washington, D. C., who in six years sky-rocketed from a Richmond, Va., newspaperman to become Seidemann's successor at $9,000.

Corson had never had any business or executive experience worth mentioning before coming to the social security board. He had taught economics part time at the University of Richmond, been with the NRA, and he also was blessed with a friend in the person of Frank Bane, former executive director of the SSB.

So Corson became Bane's technical adviser at $4,600, and being a young man who never hides his candle under a bushel, he was soon promoted to be Bane's assistant at $6,000. Then when Seidemann resigned, Corson made a headlong dive for his shoes and the accompanying salary of $9,000.

Precocious Mr. Corson is now one of the triumvirate (along with Altmeyer and executive director Oscar M. Powell) who boss the social security board. Whether they will continue to do so under eagle-eyed McNutt remains to be seen. It is a pretty good bet that if it comes to a showdown it won't be McNutt's head that will "roll in the sands."

Note—McNutt is endeavoring to get the "John Doe" cards rechecked and re-identified so that no one actually will lose a pension in the long run. However, this job may be impossible to finish before Jan. 1.

Nature's Profligacy

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

BENEATH a well shaped, vigorous, maple tree I noticed an abundant growth of last year's seedlings. They waved in the southern breeze like native woods. Scattered all about the eastern and southern sides were red, tender tops that showed where the winged, whirling seeds had floated far from the parent tree.

Within the shade these little plants were delicate, and complained for lack of moisture. The vital sunlight and the necessary water were absorbed and used up by the large old maple. Only without the borders of the maple, grew a few, where devastating roots of the bigger tree did not sap their strength. Old Mother Nature is prodigal with her seeds.

North of our line fence two large wild cherry trees stand along the hedge. This year their branches bent below the black racemes of fruit and now the uneven soil beneath the trees is covered. Yet it will be strange if a single seed from all the many thousands grows a tree. I saw no yearlings nor any two or three years old anywhere about.

At this season the pollen of the ragweed and the yellow autumn flowers floats in grayish green and golden clouds about the countryside. It fertilizes the parent plants and makes seeds possible. Yet what vast, wasted fogs of pollen fill the hazy days.

All summer long the mosquito lays its eggs on stagnant pools, to be eaten by fish, birds or dragon flies. The common frogs consign their progeny to the silent streams or ponds, but only a few escape the ravages of enemies. It seems to take thousands of seeds to produce a single forest tree, a million grain of pollen to grow one lonely pine, a bulging clutch of eggs for one single low form of life.

About our home I have counted through field glasses, a hundred different kinds of pollen and a score of various seeds upon one single inch of open ground. As I walked through some matted grass I heard the stranded seeds sift through, the animated dust rose above my knees and when I stepped upon the porch, my heavy shoes had green, yellow, red and purple dust on them. I have often wondered why Old Nature in so many ways is such a profligate sower of seeds and reaps so sparingly of all that is cast into the fruitful earth.

AMERICA'S FUTURE IS BUILT ON HOME OWNERSHIP

There is a world of tomorrow, in which the home you build today will play an important part. Secure your own future by planning every step of that home's construction with the expert counsel and facilities provided by the many reliable supply and service organizations in town. Or if yours is a home of "yesterday," remodel it to new beauty, functionalism and permanence so that it may take its place among the homes of tomorrow—its windows shining; its roof a symbol of strength and security; its door a welcome to the long years ahead. Perhaps you are too impatient for home ownership to be able to wait to see plans built into reality . . . perhaps you never owned a home, but find that conditions now permit you to: then you will want to buy one of the many magnificent homes waiting for a happy owner to add to the community in which it proudly stands.

And if you're on the other side of the picture—if you have a home to sell, you will want to get that home into the best possible condition before looking for a purchaser. A small investment in repairs can mean several hundred dollars greater evaluation for your selling price.

NUPTIAL SHOWERS AT TOP OF PARTY LIST

Miss Josephine Henness, Miss Kathleen Hawley, Mrs. Carl Warren Feted With Various Types of Functions Recently.

APRIL SHOWERS are just plain, ordinary downpours, but September showers are principally nuptial if the events of the past few days may be considered a reliable indication.

A vegetable motif predominated at the grocery shower which Miss Phyllis Underwood and Mrs. Ann Schreidt gave for Miss Josephine Henness yesterday evening at the Underwood home on Rowland avenue.

The affair was a dessert-bridge, and the dessert course was served at small tables centered with vegetable bouquets of squash, carrots, red peppers, parsley. Favors for the guests were hollowed-out potatoes filled with nuts.

Bridge was played at three tables, and prizes were won by the honoree, Miss Eleanor Clingan and Miss Kathleen Hawley. Miss Henness received a shower of groceries from the guests and an electrical gift from the hostesses.

Mrs. Earl Herrick and Mrs. Howard Yarnell are feting the bride-elect with a shower this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hartenfels, 345 West Fourth street. Miss Henness will become the bride of John K. Chatlain of Chicago, Ill., at 11:45 this Saturday morning at the Central Methodist church.

A galloping breakfast was an event of Sunday morning when the Misses Josephine Henness and Dorothy Yauger entertained in honor of Miss Kathleen Hawley, bride-elect of Colison Holmes. Guests at the party which was held at the Henness home on Stewart avenue, were members of Delta chapter of Gamma Gamma Gamma sorority.

Southern style breakfast was served at small tables, and the place favors were shell mammy dolls. Miss Hawley received a shower of miscellaneous gifts from the guests, and the hostesses presented her with an electrical gift.

Mrs. Carl Warren, the former Miss Treva Shoemaker, was guest of honor last night at a bathroom shower given by her two sisters, Mrs. Irma Augustine and Mrs. Vera McDonald at the latter's home, 184 Wood street. Hearts were played during the evening, and prizes were won by Mrs. Anna May Clark. Miss Katherine Johnson and the guest of honor. The other winners gave their prizes to Mrs. Warren.

A gift of crystal was presented by the hostesses. Out-of-town guests were Miss Gladys Stahl and Mrs. Dean Smith, Ashland, and Miss Marie Warren, Columbus. A buffet luncheon was served at the close of play from a table decorated with a large W made of the miniature candy corsages which were presented as favors to the guests.

ANNOUNCE MARRIAGE.

Announcement was made this morning of the marriage of Mrs. Lena Kern, West Fifth street, daughter of Fred Witchey, Poplar street, and Elza Richey, 129 West Fifth street. The ceremony was performed Sept. 16 at 7:30 p. m. by Rev. Grover Swoyer at the First Lutheran church. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Witchey, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, were the only attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Richey are now at home at 295 West Fifth street.

Play Friday Marks Debut of Mansfield Girl as Playwright

WHEN the Children's Theater and Junior Workshop present "The Talking Forest" at the Dickson gardens Friday night, it will be something more than the usual children's event.

It will mark the debut of a Mansfield girl as a playwright. Behind the author's name of "Rose Lyne" is Miss Roselyne Zychick, 206 Gerke avenue, a private secretary at the Tappan Stove company.

"The Talking Forest" is not the first play for children that she has written, but it is the first one that has been produced publicly. She began writing short sketches several years ago when her small nieces begged her to write school plays for them.

That was before she came to Mansfield to make her home, when she had been well launched on an entirely different career. A native of Cleveland, she had gone to Hollywood where she was private secretary to such film notables as Producer B. F. Schulberg of the Paramount studios; Garret Graham, author of "Whitey" and "Queer People," and Theodore Reeves, a Warner Brothers scenario writer.

She gained national recognition when she was selected to demonstrate the stenotype machine at national conventions where she did 200 words a minute in reporting conventions.

But behind all of this efficiency as a business woman was the constant desire to do creative writing. She wrote children's playlets and did a fantasy on Zorina, the dancer.

All of her material has been written under her pen name for her own—which means "Little Rabbit" in Polish,—was much too difficult to spell or pronounce. Miss Zychick was educated in Cleveland and in 1929 was one of ten Cleveland girls who were chosen as "typical American" girls.

"The Talking Forest" is in three acts and three scenes—a gypsy camp, a court scene and the forest. It is a fanciful story of a group of people who cursed by a wicked queen, and turned into trees, and of the young gypsy who liberated them.

The leading role, that of Teska, the Gypsy, will be played by Sara Ann Hodgson. Clever costumes for the children are so designed that they can be turned into trees in a trice. They were designed by Harold McCuen, director of the Children's Theater, and were made by Mrs. Louis Meisse and Mrs. Estes C. Thompson.

This will be the first time that Miss Zychick's play has been produced, and children's directors from the Cleveland Playhouse are expected to attend the performance.
